1,800 Felled As Heat Hits Field Mass In Baltimore

Heat Causes Hundreds to Faint; Catholics Mark Anniversary.

100,000 Attend Rites in Stadium

Many Victims Sent to Hospitals; Others Are Revived on Field.

Baltimore, May 30 (Spl.).—Overcome by heat and surging crowds, 1,800 Catholics participating in the gigantic military mass at Municipal Stadium here today required medical treatment as one of the greatest religious demonstrations in the Nation's history was marred by wholesale fainting and collapses.

More than 100,000 participated in the solemn pontifical military mass, celebrating the 300th anniversary of the church's founding in Maryland. Field hospital accommodations had been set up for 100 patients.

As the hundreds of men, women and children began flowing in, vanquished by the strain of marching in the huge parade and crowding in the stadium, attendants were unable to cope with them. Physicians and nurses were drafted frantically from among the participants. Most of those overcome were revived promptly.

Mgr. Connelly Ill.

One of the victims was Mgr. Eugene J. Connelly, spiritual director of the Washington section of Holy Name Union. After being treated at the field hospital maintained by the 104th Medical Regiment, he improved sufficiently to adhere to his plans to leave for the Capital tonight.

The clanging of ambulances, rushed to the stadium from Baltimore hospitals, provided a strange accompaniment to the chanting of priests as the mass continued, while the stricken were being treated on the scene or removed to hospitals.

Among those who required additional treatment after receiving first aid were Mrs. Delia Orendes, 65, of Washington; Miss Mary Howell, of St. Mary's Female Seminary, Leonardtown, and Miss Mary Mann, of La Plata.

Treated on Field.

Hundreds of others who came here for the spectacle from Washington and southern and western Maryland were treated at the field hospital and left without giving their names. The emergency was too great to comply with formalities.

The nurses and physicians who had come to march or to witness the impressive mass and remained to care for those overcome were from Catholic hospitals. Several of them were numbered among the heat victims.

The complete story of the celebration of the tercentenary of the founding of the Catholic Church in Maryland is on page 17.

Student Flier Falls in River

William Elliott Is Unhurt in Accident Near Hains Point.

A 20-foot fall in an ancient Curtis flying boat—a 15-year-old ship of the "pusher" type that looked more like a museum piece than an airplane—dashed the flying ambitions of William Elliott, student pilot, into the Potomac River below Hains Point yesterday.

Elliott, who lives at 931 G place, remained safe in the cockpit until his frenzied instructor, Louden Campbell, jr., of Arlington Ridge, Va., who had seen his pupil crash on his maiden flight, and Joseph Patrick English, of Washington Boat Club, arrived in a speed boat to take him ashore.

Elliott said his motor failed and that a wing clipped the water as he banked to avoid crashing into a number of pleasure boats cruising about beneath him.

With the aid of a pair of oil barrels, Elliott and Campbell hoped to be able to tow the ship back to her moorings at the boat club.

Singer's Voice Restored By Looping in Airplane

Steelton, Pa., May 30 (U.P.).—Maggie Wilson, 14, will be back on her job in the town choir Sunday. When she lost her voice this week her physician sent her for an airplane ride—told the pilot to loop the loop until Maggie's vocal power returned. The stunt worked.

Rockefeller, Sr., Home, Greeted by Children

Princeton Junction, N. J., May 30 (U.P.).—Tanned and jovial, John D. Rockefeller arrived tonight from his annual Florida vacation and left by motor for his estate at Lakewood.

The aged oil magnate posed for photographers and chatted with a group of children as he stepped off the train.

Cummings Wins Auto Classic, Sets Mark

Rose Second by Mile in Sensational Race Free From Casualties.

By Charles Dunkley.

Speedway, Indianapolis, May 30 (AP).—A home-town boy, who runs a small night club and rides a motorcycle because he likes its noise, rode to glorious victory in the 500-mile automobile race over the Indianapolis Motor Speedway today with record-breaking speed.

One hundred and thirty-five thousand spectators sat under a scorching sun to give thunderous salute to Wild Bill Cummings, 28-year old Indianapolis driver, as he triumphed over Mauri Rose, of Dayton, Ohio, in a dramatic, thrilling finish, with only 27 seconds separating them.

Never worse than fourth, and coming from behind in the last 75 miles, Cummings conquered Rose

Ritchie Is Put In Tight Spot By Tydings

Senator Fights Fifth Term for Governor to Clear Own Path in '38.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Youthful Senator Millard E. Tydings has lighted a hot fire under the candidacy of Gov. Albert Cabell Ritchie for a fifth term in the Annapolis Statehouse, it becam... apparent yesterday.

Although Ritchie and his lieutenants are squirming as the heat grows more intense, the Governor announced he has no intention whatever of letting Tydings force him to abandon his decision to seek reelection and run, instead, for a seat in the Senate here.

Observers are convinced that Tydings, in trying to force Ritchie to relinquish his fifth-term aspirations, has a twofold purpose—to capture the Democratic leadership of Maryland and, secondly, the elimination of a possibl challenger for his seat in 1938.

The Maryland bachelor Senator, a favorite as a dinner guest among Washington hostesses, for several months has opposed Ritchie's desire to seek reelection, but he has been slow in starting a movement to block him. Before Ritchie announced some weeks ago that he preferred defeat running for Governor to certain victory as a Senatorial candidate, Tydings told him he disapproved of such a course.

Will Oppose Mayor Jackson.

When Ritchie announced he would run against Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore for the gubernatorial nomination, it was generally thought Tydings would accept the decision and give at least nominal support to Ritchie, with whom he has not been particularly friendly.

Instead, Tyding summoned Gilbert A. Dailey, collector of customs at Baltimore and the Senator's chief field marshal and patronage arbiter, and laid plans to build a back fire against both Ritchie and Jackson.

They made overtures to George L. Radcliffe, close personal friend of President Roosevelt and PWA administrator for the Tenth Region.

Missoula, Mont., May 30 (AP).—Dampened by general showers, four score forest fires in northern Idaho and western Montana were under control today.

The fires followed lightning storms of Monday and Tuesday.

Four Motorists Killed En Route to Cemetery

Flint, Mich., May 30 (AP).—A Pere Marquette passenger train struck an automobile carrying seven persons on a Memorial Day trip to a cemetery here today, killing four of the occupants and injuring three others so seriously that they are not expected to live.

The dead were Assad Rizik, 55; his daughter, Josephine, 20; Ronnie George, 4, and Freddie George, 6. All were of Flint.

Senate Unit Set to Start Labor Probe

'Kick-Back' Racket, Other Wage Violations to Be Studied.

Senate investigation of the "kick-back racket" and other violations of the prevailing-wage law will be launched with public hearings within ten days, Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor, announced yesterday.

Senator Walsh's announcement followed passage by the Senate of the Walsh-Davis resolution directing the Labor Committee to investigate the prevalence of violations of the prevailing-wage law by contractors on Government construction throughout the country.

Aid of the Department of Justice will be sought by the committee, Senator Walsh said.

District officials who have been in charge of building contracts coming within scope of the prevailing-wage law are expected to be called before the committee to explain why violations were permitted under their supervision, as charged by representatives of labor unions.

Federal officials who have been charged with supervision of construction projects on which the law has been violated also are likely to be called, Senator Walsh said.

"There was presented at our preliminary hearing sufficient evidence to justify calling District officials when the investigation is begun," Senator Walsh said.

Later hearings probably will be held in other places which have been centers of large operations, Senator Walsh said.

"The committee intends to consider the question of additional legislation which would disbar from further Government contracts any contractor or sub-contractor found guilty of violating the law," he said. "Our preliminary conferences with Department of Justice officials may result in the launching of prosecutions by that department against contractors charged with violating the law."

Doctor to Spider Bite Victim Spurns Advice

Boise, Idaho, May 30 (AP).—Suggestions for treatment of Dr. William Erkenbeck, victim of a "black widow" spider bite and unconscious seven days, pour in on Dr. Harold W. Stone, who is treating him, but the physician ignores them all.

"There is no specific antidote for the poison," he said. "We are continuing the supporting treatment, to keep up his strength."

Tidal Wave Hits Chile; Sixth Disaster in 1934

Santiago, Chile, May 3 (AP).—Chile was recovering today from the shock of its sixth costly natural catastrophe since January 1.

A tidal wave yesterday swept the coast around Coronel, destroying many homes. Two earthquakes, a cyclone and two floods this year have brought death and injury to scores and property damage running into millions of dollars.

U. S. Horsewoman and Trainer Held After Canadian Drug Raid

Montreal, May 30 (AP).—Nan Brenton, 38, identified by authorities as a woman race horse owner from Hagerstown, Md., and Finne Dunlap, 35, colored trainer, were arraigned here today on charges of illegal possession of narcotics.

Their detention was said to have resulted from the campaign of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police against use of narcotics on race horses.

Both pleaded not guilty, and Miss Brenton was released on bail of $950 posted by Jules Dugal, local race-track official. Dunlap was held without bail, and a preliminary hearing for both was set for next week.

Mounted Police visited a railroad siding at Blue Bonnett race track, searching special cars bringing thoroughbreds here for the 14-day meet opening June 2.

The officers reported finding a number of capsules of heroin in a truck, and took Dunlap into custody.

The woman arrived later by automobile and was taken into custody when she went to police headquarters to inquire about the raid on her cars.

Hagerstown, Md., May 30 (Spl.). Nan Brenton, held at Montreal, Canada, on charges of possessing narcotics, is not known by Hagerstown horsemen.

An owner and trainer by the name of George C. Brenton, who had two horses entered at the races here during the recent meet, is the only person by that name known here. According to local horsemen, Brenton told them he was taking his horses to Canada.

No-Hit Feat Of Whitehill Ends in 9th

Nats Win Opener by 1-0 as Chapman's Single Shocks 70,000.

Yankees Win in Final, 5-4, After Battle of 11 Innings.

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor of The Post).

Yankee Stadium, New York, May 30.—Bound in the spell of a one-hit pitching masterpiece by Earle Whitehill in the opening game, the Yankees salvaged the respect of 70,000 thrill-soaked spectators by bursting through in the eleventh inning to win the second game of the Decoration Day double-header.

But the dramatic, albeit unsuccessful attempt of Whitehill to niche himself a hi[gh] place in the pitching hall of fame, lingered long with the 70,000 even as they tumbled out of the vast Yankee Stadium and scattered to the sidewalks of New York, thankful that the Yanks were able to get an even break out of the proceedings.

By 1 to 0 the Nat[s] won the opening game before losing by 5 to 4 in the eleventh inning, but back in that second battle when Tony Lazzeri singled with the bases full in that ninth inning of the opener New York was presenting the strange spectacle of 70,000 supposedly hostile fans shouting encouragement for Whitehill in his bid for pitching immortality, after for eight innings without a solitary for eght innings without a solitary hit.

Then Came the Hit.

But it was not to be. Facing the menacing trio of Ruth, Gehrig and Chapman, the diminutive Washington southpaw faltered on the very threshold of success. Ruth he got out to complete eight and one-third innings of hitless efforts and Gehrig he walked. But along came Ben Chapman, who had hit Whitehill once before—on the chin in that famous riot game in Washington last year. Today he knocked all notions of a no-hit game from Whitehill's head with a scorching single between Bluege and Cronin out into center field, while the 70,000 half-applauded, half-moaned in mixed emotions as their dream of a pitching epic faded.

Whitehill didn't finish the game. Tiring perceptibly, he was withdrawn from the box by Manager Cronin and with Yankees on first and second and only one out, Jack Russell was summoned to the box. Russell applied the finishing touches to the shut-out defeat of the Yanks, their second runless game since August of 1931, and their first since Lefty Grove turned the trick last summer.

With the tying run on second and the winning run on first, Russell

English Gunman, Trapped Within 2 Days, Kills Self

Worthing, England, May 30 (AP).—England's widespread search for a gunman ended today, 48 hours after it started, with the suicide of the fugitive, accused of wounding a politician with a revolver.

A woman, Mrs. Michael Sadleir, with two bloodhounds on leash, came upon the man, Leonard Hill, as he lay under a tree in the woods.

"There he is!" she shouted to policemen, who ran up to close in.

Hill, trapped and realizing the stern attitude of British courts toward those who use firearms, shot himself with the same pistol with which he had wounded the policeman, Arthur Jex. Jex was not seriously wounded.

Monument Blasted; Dedication Spoiled

Follansbee, W.Va., Officials Hunt Vandals.

Follansbee, W. Va., May 30 (Spl.). State and county police who are trying to run down dynamiters who spoiled Memorial Day exercises here said tonight they were without clews.

The community had arranged to honor one of its first citizens, the late L. A. Diller, former mayor, by dedicating a monument to him in a special morning ceremony. But, just before dawn a terrific explosion rocked the town, breaking many windows. When officers reached the scene they found that vandals had underlaid the Diller monument with a heavy charge of dynamite and set it off, blowing the heavy stone into bits.

Police suspect it was the work of practical jokers.

Drunken Driver Suspect Rams Dynamite Car

Bend, Oreg., May 30 (AP).—Accused of drunken driving after his automobile, carrying a load of dynamite, had collided with another car, J. M. Perry, jr., was held in jail today.

Police said Perry's car also contained detonators an fuses. Perry was arrested by Sheriff Claude McCauley after his machine crashed into another and overturned on a highway south of here last night.

British Plan Final Offer On War Debt

Cabinet Seeking Way to Avoid Default Onus of Johnson Act.

U.S. Acceptance Unlikely Unless Roosevelt Changes Mind.

London, May 30 (AP).—The British cabinet today reviewed the war debts situation and is understood to have agreed upon proposals which, if acceptable to the United States, Great Britain hopes will lead to a final settlement of the problem.

The immediate objective is to enable Great Britain to avoid being branded a defaulter without having to pay more than a token on the $75,000,000 instalment due Junue 15.

Political circles expected a new debts note to be dispatched to Washington tonight, in time for the text to be available at the White House before noon tomorrow.

This would enable Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, to make a full statement on the debt question in the House of Commons tomorrow afternoon, but whether this schedule will be followed cold not be determined exactly tonight.

Premier Plays for Time.

Premier Ramsay MacDonald, in the House of Commons this afternoon, adopted the usual parliamentary methods of clamping down on discussions of an important problem under delicate negotiations by asking questioners to repeat their inquiries in regard to debts in a few days.

Whatever transpires during the next week, no informed observer in either parliamentary or financial circles expects Britain to make any more than another token payment.

If the suggestions Britain makes offer no basis for negotiations, financial circles believe the government would be forced to a clear-cut default, rather than face the storm of criticism which would be aroused by full payment of the instalment.

Points to Italian Scale.

Although oral discussion of the subject was discouraged, Chamberlain gave the written answer to a question in the House of Commons to the effect that if the British war debt had been settled at the start on the same basis as the Italian debt to the United States the amount already paid would exceed the amount due by approximately $1,240,000,000 at par and no further payment would be due until 1955.

Thereafter, on that basis pay-

Doctors Battling For Baby, Victim Of Ant Swarms

Bells, Tenn., May 30 (AP).—Medical science fought hopefully today to save the eyesight of a 3-month-old child, seriously ill as a result of an attack by a horde of red ants.

Physicians expressed belief that the toxic poison inflicted by the ants is beginning to leave the bloodstream and that eventually normal vision will be restored. The child, Harold Watson Patrick, has lost the sight of one eye, and the other eye has been affected.

The ants swarmed all over the child's face when his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Patrick, left him in his crib last Friday, as they worked in a nearby field.

Governor Rolph's Condition Worse

San Francisco, May 30 (AP).—The condition of Gov. James Rolph, jr., was described as a "little weaker" today by Dr. J. M. Scanland.

"The Governor is resting quietly, but if anything his condition is a little weaker," said Dr. Scanland, adding that the Californian chief executive drank a little orange juice containing albumen.

Physicians said the Governor had been kept alive during the night only by the use of a heart stimulant and Dr. Scanland said "only the immediate injection of the drug stood between the Governor and death.

Typhoid Poisoning Of Pu-Yi Rumored

Report of Serious Illness Is Unconfirmed.

Shanghai, May 30 (AP).—Widespread discussion of the possibility that political enemies had attacked Emperor Kang Teh of Manchukuo with typhoid germs was heard in Shanghai today as Chinese reports that the ruler is seriously ill remained unconfirmed.

The Japanese Legation discounted the reports, stating that its advices are that the Emperor, formerly Henry Pu-Yi, is in good health.

The Chinese dispatches related that after being stricken with typhoid, the Emperor rejected Western-trained physicians and called in a Chinese herb doctor, despite Japanese objections.

Bogota, Colombia, May 30 (AP).—President Enrique Olaya Herrera today appointed a new cabinet with Absalon Fernandez de Soto as premier.

Textile Strike Is Called Next Week; Steel Labor Rejects Roosevelt Plan

Only Redcaps Greet French Fliers Here

Post Staff Photos.

Amid a round of enthusiastic welcome yesterday, the French transatlantic fliers paused to pay tribute to America's war dead. They are shown above placing a wreath upon the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington National Cemetery. Capt. Maurice Rossi is placing the wreath while his companion, Lieut. Paul Codos, looks on.

By Andre Vulliet.

Maurice Rossi and Paul Codos, the only fliers who have made a return trip over the Atlantic, yesterday received no greetings on their arrival in Washington.

They spent a few hours in the Capital, during which they saw President Roosevelt and found him "most impressive" and laid a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery. They flew back to New York in a private plane immediate-

President Declares for Collective Bargaining to Avert Crisis.

Business Assails Wagner Bill Again

Harriman Joins Emery in Sizzling Attack on Measure.

A general strike in the cotton textile industry, effective Monday, was ordered last night by Thomas F. McMahon, president of the United Textile Workers of America.

At the same time union leaders from steel centers rejected President Roosevelt's plan to avert the threatened general steel strike by holding Government-supervised elections of workers' representatives.

With the zero hour in a threatened Nation-wide steel strike barely a fortnight away, President Roosevelt moved to head off a labor crisis yesterday by taking a flat-footed stand for collective bargaining in approving revision of the steel code.

The Presidential maneuver coincided with inauguration of a broad new offensive against the Wagner industrial adjustment bill by American business in a desperate effort to turn the tide of sentiment won for the measure by recent industrial outbreaks in Toledo, Minneapolis and San Francisco.

Sizzling criticism of the Wagner proposal was voiced by both James A. Emery, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, and Henry I. Harriman, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Aid Pledged to Labor.

Because of the holiday, negotiations were at a standstill in prospective walkouts by 400,000 steel and textile workers.

President Roosevelt met the steel-strike warning directly by promising to provide employes' elections demanded by union leaders. He made his pledge in the face of the Government's failure to obtain an McCarran Pledges Nation's Faith in Causes for Which Heroes Fell.

By Frank Getty.

The Nation's Capital honored the Nation's war dead yesterday.

On an Arlington hilltop, the clear, sad notes of "Taps" were sounded by a Marine bugler at the conclusion of impressive services in the Amphitheater of the cemetery, to which some 30,000 persons made reverent pilgrimage.

The Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, banked with somber wreaths and floral tributes, was a focal point for Washingtonians and visitors during Memorial Day, numerous

Chicago Census Shows Population Decline

Chicago, May 30 (AP).—The City of Chicago, according to preliminary estimates as a result of a CWA census, has lost about 100,000 population since 1930.

"There are," Charles Newcomb, director of the special census, said, "more women and girls in Chicago than four years ago, but fewer families. The decrease in men and boys more than offsets the gain in women and girls. Where the men have gone to we can only wonder. We counted all in shelters and lodging houses."

Mt. Airy Woman Hotel Gun Victim

Baltimore, May 30 (Spl.).—A house detective at the Lord Baltimore Hotel today discovered in one of the rooms the body of a woman registered as Miss Virginia Heard, of Mount Airy, Md. She had been shot through the right temple.

Her head was buried beneath two pillows, the detective said, and an automatic pistol was clasped in her right hand.

A note left by the woman is said to have indicated she planned to commit suicide. Coroner James M. Fenton gave a suicide verdict.

Johnson 'Fine,' Quits Hospiatl

Miss Robinson Denies He Is Near Collapse; Had Teeth Attended.

Pronounced physically fit after 24 hours in Walter Reed Hospital, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson last night returned to his Washington hotel.

Published reports that he was on the verge of a nervous collapse drew sharp denial from his confidential secretary, Miss Frances Robinson.

"Gen. Johnson left the hospital tonight feeling fine," she said.

"He went out there last night to have a couple of teeth filled and to have his sinuses drained. A Walter Reed doctor told him he might as well spend the night there."

Miss Robinson added the NRA chief felt good enough yesterday to spend the day at the hospital working on "his latest contribution to the good old art of after-dinner speaking."

Johnson himself has repeatedly scoffed at periodic rumors that his health had been endangered by the grueling pace at which he has been working.

"They can't kill a Johnson," he told a friend only the other day.

Astor Again Plans To Wed; This Time It Is Ellen French

Dedham, Mass., May 30 (AP).—John Jacob Astor, 3d, visiting here at the Cherry Lane Home of Francis O. French, said tonight he would be married the early part of July to Miss Ellen Tuck French, 18, daughter of his host.

Young Astor said the ceremony would take place at Newport, R. I., and that there would be no bridesmaids, but discussed the matter no further.

The bride-to-be had been reported last winter as a probable bridesmaid of Miss Eileen Gillespie, New York debutante to whom Astor was engaged last November. The engagement was broken in January.

Prince Georges Man Is Shot As Terrorists Strike Again

Shot through the chest by one of three colored bandits who have spread terror through Prince Georges County the past week, John T. Geary jr., 43, operator of a gasoline station and barbecue stand near Priest Ridge, Md., was conceded a chance to recover by physicians at Casualty Hospital last night.

"That fellow didn't give me a break at all," Geary said weakly from his hospital cot, where he lay yesterday after a blood transfusion. "He walked in and shot, and didn't even give me a chance to put up my hands!"

The robbers entered the combination store about 1:45 a. m. and, after one of them had fired the bullet into Geary's chest while his father, 70, and William Hopkins, son of Sheriff W. Curtis Hopkins, looked on, rifled the cash register and escaped with $40.

As one bandit scooped the money, Geary lay helpless. When his father made a move toward him, he was warned to remain motionless.

"We'll take care of him all right," said the gunman.

The car the bandits used was stolen from Town Bailiff Lawrence Dayton, of Bladensburg, by two colored men last week, Miss Mary Collins, a waitress at the barbecue stand, told Sheriff Hopkins.

Sheriff Hopkins' son was in the establishment when the holdup occurred, about 1:45 a. m.

As he rifled the cash register, one of the men dropped a blackjack, which later was turned over to County Policeman G. William Gray. After the drawers had been emptied, the robbers began to rifle the pockets of the elder Geary when a truck arrived at the station. The robbers fled.

Dr. James Truitt rushed Geary to Casualty Hospital in the Glenn Dale rescue squad car.

Customer Kills Bandit And Hair Cut Goes On

Chicago, May 30 (U.P.).—James Ferrol, barber, was cutting Arthur Steuben's hair when Antone Amachlinger, 22, bandit, entered. Steuben, a watchman off duty, drew his revolver and shot Amachlinger, killing him instantly.

Ferrol finished cutting Steuben's hair while waiting for police to come.

Redcaps Only At 'Reception' To Frenchmen

Difference in Times Held to Blame; Pay Visit to White House.

ly after their visit to the White House.

The coolness of Washington's reception was due to confusion over New York and Washington times. Count de Leusse, French Embassy secretary, was at Union Station to meet the fliers at 7:30 a. m., as prearranged. But the aviators' train had come in at 6:30 a. m., which according to Codos' watch, regulated on New York daylight time, meant 7:30. Seeing nobody but redcaps, the two aviators left their Pullman and went to a barber shop, phoned the French Embassy for help and finally took a cab.

Overtaken on Way.

They were overtaken on their way to the Embassy by Count de Leusse and based their failure to look at a clock in Union Station on their lack of sleep. As to Rossi, he still carried Paris time on his watch.

Andre de Laboulaye, the French Ambassador, introduced the fliers to President Roosevelt, who received them in the presence of Secretary of State Hull and Undersecretary of State Phillips. The President offered his congratulations to Rossi and Codos and thanked them for a card they handed him, which they addressed to him from Paris. The President said he would keep it with a like card he had received from Admiral Byrd.

Leaving the White House, Rossi, the captain of the expedition, said the President was "formidable," which in colloquial French is an expression of utmost admiration. Codos was likewise impressed by President Roosevelt's simplicity. Both fliers, who have a hard time making themselves understood, were amazed by the President's fluent knowledge of French.

At 10 a. m., accompanied by Col. Lombard, French Military Attache, and Count Pierre de Leusse, French Embassy secretary, they laid a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, with the inscription "To the Unknown Soldier, his comrades, Rossi and Codos."

Plan Good-Will Tour.

The fliers left at 12:20 p. m. from Bolling Field in a private plane, with Newark their destination. Asked by Maj. E. E. Aldrin, their pilot, if he wanted to pilot back, Paul Codos answered "I'd rather be a passenger for a change."

Rossi and Codos announced that authorization had just been received from the French government, which subsidized the flight, to make a good-will tour in the United States and maybe Mexico with their plane, the Joseph Le Brix, when it is put in order by two French mechanics who sailed from France yesterday with a new propeller.

Although their plans were not yet definite, the fliers declared they expected to fly nonstop from New York to San Francisco and come back by shorter laps. They mentioned Chicago as one of their stops. They will go back to France by steamer.

Capt. Rossi and Lieut. Codos, both short and stocky, with dark hair and a ruddy complexion, have not given up the idea of bettering their own world record for a long-distance flight.

Sad but determined, they explained they intend to try again next October, making a hop either to the Pacific Coast or to South America. They said the latter would be easier because it would be safer to fly over the ocean after a flight of 15 or 20 hours over Europe and Africa had lightened the plane.

Will Use Same Plane.

They will use the same 5-year-old, single-motored plane, the Joseph Le Brix," which has now flown about 1,000 hours and some 100,000 miles, Rossi declared.

Asked to comment upon their flight, Codos said they had a highly difficult take-off, which obliged them to fly between trees and telegraph poles when their plane refused to gain height at the end of the Bourget field.

Codos believed something must have hit their propeller during the take-off, which tore its metal covering, uncovering the wood. When they nosed their way through the "pea soup" fog off Newfoundland, the dampness warped the propeller, which started vibrating and causing troubles in the wings.

The situation became so uncertain, the fliers said, that a few hours before they reached New York they put on their parachute, in case something should happen.

"It is the first time we fail to do something we intended to," commented Paul Codos.

Field Officials Disclaim Charge of Tampering

New York, May 30 (AP).—Capt. George A. Pond's charge that the plane in which he and Lieut. Cesare Sabelli flew to Ireland had been tampered with was disclaimed today by officials at Floyd Bennett Field and John Carisi, aeronautical engineer.

"If anything was wrong with the plane at the time of the take-off, it was the result of carelessness—not on my part, however," said Carisi, who had charge of maintaining and repairing the ship.

When he made a final inspection three days before the take-off, he said, the instrument board and its wiring were in a "deuce of a shape." The fliers, he asserted, had been assisted in preparations by some "inexperienced boys."

"I fixed it up," he added. "I did not see the plane again."

Neal Grignon, inspector at the field, said the fliers were responsible for the planes' condition while it was at the field.

Hitler Talks of Peace And Assembles Arms

Observer Finds Nazi Chieftain Has Realized Risk of Premature Conflict as Germany Confronts Overwhelming Domestic Problems.

(Editor's Note: Following is the second of a series of ten articles on the puzzling European situation by Hamilton Fish Armstrong, who has just returned from a trip to the principal capitals. Mr. Armstrong deals extensively with the possibility of war abroad.)

II. GERMANY AND THE WORLD.

By Hamilton Fish Armstrong,
Editor of Foreign Affairs.

In every European foreign office anxious eyes have watched Germany again planting her feet on the road which William II, Von Tirpitz, Von Bernhardi and others once surveyed and prepared, and along which in 1914 they actually set out—the road leading to the hegemony of Europe. Every word, every action, is examined as a possible sign, a possible step, in what is believed to be a conscious effort to transfer the continent's center of gravity eastward across the Rhine, this being the preliminary to Germany's taking what she wants, without war if nobody opposes, with war if any nation is so wrong-headed and presumptuous as to block the way.

Following Bismarck's policy of concentrating on one objective at a time, Chancellor Hitler on January 26, 1934, signed a ten-year treaty of nonaggression with Poland, and about the same time began attempting to mollify an aroused English public opinion by sounding a more accommodating note in the armament discussions. In his talks with Capt. Eden, as in those with visiting correspondents, the word "peace" always was on his tongue. But actions in Germany belied his talk. There was revealed a rise of 220,000,000 marks in the 1934-35 defense ministry budget, bringing the total to 894,323,200 marks ($357,600,000); separate air ministry estimates rose another 130,000,000 marks to a total of about 210,000,000 marks ($83,600,000); Paris found that aerodromes were being constructed in the demilitarized zone; London received unimpeachable information of the wholesale manufacture of new bombing planes capable of crossing the channel in a few minutes; Krupps appropriated 24,000,000 marks for improvement of plant and took on an additional 7,000 workers.

The figure for the defense ministry does not include the expenses of the storm troops or the labor camps, for which the appropriations are 250,000,000 marks, or of the police, for which 190,000,000 marks are appropriated.—London Times, March 28, 1934.

The fact remains that Hitler professed a more moderate policy, and as nothing in Nazi Germany happens by chance, this development may be taken as designed to serve a definite purpose. He had come to realize the risk of a premature conflict. Doubtless, too, he saw the need for postponing as many international difficulties as possible in view of the tense domestic situation resulting from the church disturbance and the steady deterioration of Germany's export trade.

In the writer's opinion, his pacific statements had a purpose quite in accord with the general conception of propaganda and mass psychology exposed in "Mein Kampf;" namely, to assume that the average human being is an imbecile, and that if an untruth is repeated sufficiently often it finally will be accepted even in the face of contrary fact. The untruth in this case is that Germany is not planning to make war; the fact is that Germany is arming steadily and preparing her youth spiritually and physically for war and that she plans to make war in case war is necessary in order for her to achieve her ends.

But before we attempt to describe Hitler's program in the foreign field we must refer to several factors in the domestic situation which condition the speed at which the program can be put into effect.

Nazis Act on Conception That Might Makes Right.

The Nazis do not believe in abstract justice, and act on the conception that might gives right. Yet, curiously enough, the two chief checks which they have experienced since they acquired power in Germany have come from an obstacle the existence of which they denied, but which proved nevertheless to have very solid properties—the stone wall of conscience and moral judgment.

Important sections of the German people have become tense and restive because of the fight which the Nazis are making on the churches. They have attempted to introduce the "leadership" principle into the Evangelical Church, to enforce the "Aryan rule" in the administration of sacraments, and to substitute Norse mythology for the Bible. In so doing they have split the clergy into two great groups, the "neo-pagans" and those who maintain the right to practice Christianity following the tenets and traditions of their church and in accordance with the dictates of their own conscience.

Simultaneously the Nazis have attempted to take away from the Catholic Church the education and training of the Catholic youth, and to introduce the same racial conceptions which they have been trying to force upon the Evangelical Church. As a result, Cardinal Faulhaber, of Munich; Bishop Bares, of Berlin, and many other bishops, protesting week after week from the pulpit against the arrest and mistreatment of the Catholic clergy who refuse to accept the dictates of men against what they believe are the teachings of God have been raised to new eminence and influence in German life. And the Pope himself, in carefully weighed pronouncements, has gone so far as to denounce Nazi propaganda "which points away from Christ and back to paganism."

This religious struggle, partly waged in the open but for the greater part carried on quietly, has sent fissures into the very heart of the German people. Against the conscience of German Christianity the Nazis found their might did not wholly prevail.

Financial And Economic Situation Is Catastrophic.

In another direction, too, the present government has found itself swimming in deep waters. The financial and economic situation is catastrophic, and for a simple reason. Germany must buy abroad a great part of the raw materials which she converts into exportable manufactured goods. But the racial policy of the Nazis, and their treatment of socialists, republicans and liberals of every variety, has been repugnant to people all over the world. Whereever Nazi policy has been understood in its essential aspects—wherever, namely, there is freedom of thought, speech and judgment, the real fruits of liberty—men have spontaneously given expression to their feelings by refusing to buy German goods and German services whenever others are available.

This antipathy for everything Germany is far from being the result of organized boycotts by Jewish organizations, though obviously these have been effective; it has arisen (as Signor Mussolini predicted it would in a talk with the writer in May, 1933, while he and Hitler were still friends) because the violation of Jewish rights and of civilized standards of equity and fair play has outraged not merely Jews but all Christians also.

The boycott against Nazi Germany, both spontaeous and organized, has dangerously widened the gap between what Germany must buy abroad and what she can sell. As a result, the gold cover for the German currency has been drained away almost to the vanishing point, and this in turn has forced the government to impose controls over many categories of imports, with a consequent weakening of the country's capacity to provide employment for its working population.

This progressive deterioration of the German economy has had its origin, to a very distinct extent, in the moral judgment of the outside world. Against the moral judgment of widespread millions who do not condone a return to the standards and actions of Louis XIV and the Huguenot persecution the might of the Nazis has not prevailed.

(The Reichsbank's holding of gold and foreign exchange dropped from about 395,000,000 marks to about 161,000,000 marks from January 1 to May 15, 1934—a drop in the note cover from 10.8 to 4.8 per cent).

There are those who believe that in these two fields of conflict where morals play a part the Nazis are still to receive their rudest shocks. The Church, whether of Rome or Luther, has survived mistreatment and often had thrived on it. The Rev. Dr. Reinhold Krause, Berlin spokesman of the Nazi "German Christians," announced in a speech at the Sportpalast on November 13, 1933: "The crucifix will be abolished." It has not yet been abolished, and it will not be abolished soon.

Passage of Time Will Not Solve Economic Troubles.

Nor is the mere passage of time going to dissolve the economic dilemma. The stringent deflationary program now being adopted in Germany may be helpful; but the difficulty of capturing the foreign market will remain. The government might liquidate part of the foreign securities owned privately in Germany; it also is due to receive this year something over 200,000,000 marks in maturing German credits to Russia. But these possible sources of foreign exchange can be only temporarily effective against a steady draining away of the Reichsbank's reserve at the recent rate of 25,000,000 marks a week. Germany can not dispense with foreign raw materials, and the outside world does not seem likely to change its temper rapidly and begin buying sufficient goods from Germany to supply her with the necessary foreign exchange.

The Nazi government might negotiate direct trade agreements with particular countries covering specific materials and goods; but such agreements are complicated to work out and would not show immediate results in practice. Meanwhile, German production costs are increasing so that possible reductions in foreign tariff barriers tend to lose their beneficial effect. Besides, foreign prejudice against German goods would persist even though these were given preferred tariff treatment. The American Government, for example, might set favorable rates on certain German manufactures in return for Germany's undertaking to purchase equivalent amounts of American cotton, lard or copper. But it has no power to make the American people like and buy those favored German goods.

No attempt can be made here to describe the material and psychological sources of Nazi ideas and actions. History will debate, and will never decide the question whether the German Republic could have survived if its neighbors had brought themselves to treat its leaders with more consideration, to recognize it as something morally different from the Hohenzollern Empire from which they had suffered and over which they had finally gained the mastery. At the moment we are not apportioning responsibilities but examining current phenomena. The psychology of the Nazi revolutionaries is one of the realities which observers of the European scene must note and describe. Another reality is the resistance which Nazi policy has awakened abroad. The present condition of German economy is distinctly a result of that determined resistance.

Driver Faces Trial For Injuring Youth

Winchester, Va., May 30 (Spl.).—Clayton Walters, 18, of Middletown, Va., near here, was released under $250 bond today by Magistrate A. J. Tavenner, pending trial of John Willis, 35, on a charge of hit-and-run driving as the result of a car allegedly driven by the latter seriously injuring Jack O'Neal, 19, Sunday night.

Willis will go to trial before Magistrate Tavenner Saturday morning. Walters, who was said to have been Willis' companion, was held under the bond as a material witness. Meanwhile, Willis remained in the local jail.

Labor Backed by President While Strike Crisis Nears injunction against Weirton Steel Co., which refused to permit such balloting.

The high point of the President's decision read:

"In order to insure the free exercise of the rights of employes under the provisions of section 7 of this (recovery) act and of article IV of this code, I will undertake promptly to provide, as the occasion may demand, for the election by employes in each industrial unit of representatives of their own choosing for the purpose of collective bargaining and other mutual aid or protection, under the supervision of an appropriate agency and in accordance with suitable rules and regulations."

Fund Given Racket Quiz.

Meanwhile, the Senate appropriated $15,000 for investigation of the "kick-back racket" in which workers on public projects in many cities have been forced to return part of their pay to contractors. Senator Henry F. Ashurst (Democrat), Arizona, will head the investigating committee.

The new code changed somewhat the steel industry's price-basing system, assailed by the Federal Trade Commission, the Darrow board and many consumers as unfair and monopolistic. The President directed the commission and NRA jointly to study the new price system and report recommendations for protection of consumers, if necessary, within six months.

One of the major steel problems centered around the system of basing prices on a limited number of points and charging the buyer freight rates from one of those cities. Critics protested this restored many abuses of the outlawed "Pittsburgh plus" arrangement under which consumers were charged freight costs from Pittsburgh, even though they bought steel from a plant next door.

New Basing Points Added.

In the revised pact, as Gen. Hugh S. Johnson explained, new basing points were added "to take care of outstanding complaints such as Worcester, Mass., Duluth, Minn., Corpus Christie, Tex., and Stockton, Calif."

Power of the code authority to set aside unfair prices was revoked. Present quotations are based on all-rail transportation; the new agreement calls for reductions in case of delivery by water or truck.

Mike F. Tighe, president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, commented the President's statement "seems to be clear and explicit as to what he wants done."

He declined to say whether Mr. Roosevelt's election promise eliminated prospects for a walkout. The union leader indicated developments of the next week or so would decide whether he would carry out announced plans to call a "holiday" June 15 because manufacturers have refused to recognize steel unions.

Union Leaders Confident.

Union spokesmen claimed elections would show a sweeping majority of workers favored bargaining through American Federation of Labor affiliates instead of through company unions.

The President's statement revived reports that the Administration would seek to force the steel companies to bargain with representatives chosen to speak for workers.

Reference by Mr. Roosevelt to "an appropriate agency" to supervise the elections was interpreted as indicating he counted on Congress passing the industrial adjustment bill, sponsored by Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York. If so, the new labor board would control. Otherwise, they would be supervised by the present National Labor Board, headed by Wagner.

A supplemental statement by Johnson cited an increase of $12,336,972 in steel wages above last June and addition of 86,630 wage earners.

"No Oppression," Says Johnson.

"It is evident in the light of these figures," Johnson declared, "that consumers were not being exploited and that small enterprises were not being oppressed under the code."

An 8-hour day was established unconditionally by the new code. It will apply to the entire industry. The average work week remained 40 hours, with a 6-day maximum. Piece workers were guaranteed the minimum hourly rate.

Unfair practice restrictions banned secret price cutting, required products improperly classified as "scrap" could not be sold as such and outlawed coercion to induce withdrawal of a base price by a producer.

Expenses of code administration would be apportioned on the basis of invoiced value of delivered products during the preceding year, reducing the bill for small mills formerly assumed to have an arbitrary bottom of volume. No little factory will be deprived of at least one vote, despite its volume.

Emery Hits Wagner Bill.

Emery predicted passage of the Wagner measure would "arouse widespread protest for its injustice, its invalidity and its impolicy. It will multiply complaint and conflict. It is not calculated to make for industrial peace, but to incite disagreement."

"Hooey," Replies Cord To Kidnaping Story

London, May 30 (AP).—With many a chuckle and the comment, "Hooey. hooey, hooey," E. L. Cord, American automobile and airplane manufacturer, today read reports that he had left the United States with his family because of kidnaping threats.

"According to these accounts, I must have left with my shirt tail flying," he remarked.

Toledo Power Strike Leaders Agree to Delay

Toledo, Ohio, May 30 (AP).—A committee of electrical workers agreed early tonight, following an all-day series of conferences, to recommend to members of their union a postponement of 24 hours in their strike, which had been scheduled to begin tomorrow morning.

Charles P. Taft, Federal mediator, said that the postponement was accepted by the committee after company officials had asked for delay and after Taft had requested it personally.

If the union at its meeting tonight approves the postponement, the negotiators will resume their meetings tomorrow afternoon. If a settlement proposal is not ready by the conclusion of the conference, the walkout will begin at 7 a. m. Friday, Taft said.

At the same time, Taft announced that he would meet with automotive strikers tonight. What he declared as a "new lead" to end disputes, which were climaxed by bloody rioting last week at the electric Auto-Lite plant, in which two were killed and 200 injured, has been developed by mediators, he said.

Taft said the "new lead" had no connection with a statement issued today by C. O. Miniger, president of the Electric Auto-Lite Co., offering to submit all questions to the Automobile Labor Board at Detroit. This proposal has been rejected by strikers.

Taft said he talked to Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, today and gave her a report.

The mediator-in-chief said the general strike, approved by 68 of the 103 union locals and the date of which will be announced at a big labor meeting Friday, was "mentioned but not discussed" today.

National Unity Lauded in Talk By President

President at Gettysburg Says All Partners in Government.

age man. We are all brothers now in a new understanding."

Reaching this historic town late in the afternoon, Mr. Roosevelt halted in the National Cemetery to watch children drop flowers on tiers of graves of men who fought here.

Speaking from a platform nearby a few minutes later, he asserted it is "in our power to attain the great ideal—a consolidated Nation."

Purposes of Peace.

"Here, in the presence of the spirits of those who fell on this ground," he said, "we give renewed assurance that the passions of war are moldering in the tombs of time and the purposes of peace are flowing in the hearts of a united people."

Three elements were listed by the President as hindering progress:

"These groups are those who seek to stir up political animosity or to build political advantage by the distortion of facts; those who, by declining to follow the rues of the game, seek to gain an unfair advantage over those who live up to the rules, and those few who still, because they have never been willing to take an interest in their fellow Americans, dwell inside their own narrow spheres and still represent the selfishness of sectionalism which has no place in our National life."

Gov. Pinchot of Pennsylvania was cheered as he introduced President Roosevelt as "the leader" who has taken the helm of a "newly united Nation."

Praises Pinchot.

In opening his brief address, Mr. Roosevelt interpolated a word for Gov. Pinchot, whom he described as "a man who has so splendidly served the cause of progressive government and humanity."

Throngs lined the route of the Presidential party from the station to the cemetery. Gov. and Mrs. Pinchot rode in the open car with Mr. Roosevelt.

The President returned after the brief and simple exercises to his special train to hasten on to New York, where tomorrow he will review the United States fleet.

From a platform among the trees, not far from the spot where Abraham Lincoln dedicated the National cemetery in 1863, the President spoke to thousands massed on the greensward about the broad semicircle of graves where lie more than 3,000 known and unknown Civil War soldiers.

From an open car, friends pointed out for the President the hallowed places where, after three days of furious fighting, the tide turned for the armies of the Union.

As he ascended the rostrum, he was greeted by a smiling, white-haired little woman of 85, Mrs. M. O. Smith, of Hanover, Pa., who sang on the platform the day Lincoln stood in a November wind and dedicated the new cemetery of the battlefield.

She was a slip of a girl then, but she recalled that the rail-splitter President complimented her and kissed her.

Those On Rostrum.

On the rostrum with the President were a delegation of United States Senators, Representatives and other men prominent in public and private life. Representative Harry Haines, of Red Lion, Pa., presided, and Russell C. Martin, of Los Angeles, commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, who came here at the personal invitation of the President, read Gen. Logan's order which established May 30 as Memorial Day.

Lincoln's Gettysburg Address was read by Park F. Yengling, National commander in chief of the Sons of Union Veterans, of Bay Village, Ohio. The Rev. Dr. Robert J. White, Washington, D. C., National chaplain of the American Legion, gave the invocation, and the Rev. Dr. Herbert C. Alleman, of Gettysburg, delivered the benediction.

Text of President's Address

Roosevelt Declares Sectionalism Doomed by New National Spirit in Memorial Day Speech at Gettysburg.

Gettysburg, Pa., May 30 (Spl.).—President Roosevelt's Memorial Day address at the Gettysburg Battlefield follows:

My Friends:

On these hills of Gettysburg two brave armies of Americans once met in combat. Not far from here, in a valley likewise consecrated to American valor, a ragged Continental Army survived a bitter winter to keep alive the expiring hope of a new Nation; and near to this battlefield and that valley stands that invincible city where the Declaration of Independence was born and the Constitution of the United States was written by the fathers. Surely, all this is holy ground.

It was in Philadelphia, too, that Washington spoke his solemn, tender, wise words of farewell—a farewell not alone to his generation, but to the generation of those who laid down their lives here and to our generation and to the America of tomorrow. Perhaps if our fathers and grandfathers had truly heeded those words we should have had no family quarrel, no battle of Gettysburg, no Appomattox.

As a Virginian, President Washington had a natural pride in Virginia; but as an American, in his stately phrase, "the name of American, which belongs to you, in your National capacity, must always exalt the just pride of patriotism, more than any appellation derived from local discrimination."

Recalls Washington Tours to Aid National Unity.

Recognizing the strength of local and State and sectional prejudices and how strong they might grow to be, and how they might take from the National Government some of the loyalty the citizens owed to it, he made three historic tours during his Presidency. One was through New England in 1789, another through the Northern States in 1790, and still another through the Southern States in 1791. He did this, as he said, "In order to become better acquainted with their principal characters and internal circumstances, as well as to be more accessible to numbers of well informed persons who might give him useful advices on political subjects."

But he did more to stimulate patriotism than merely to travel and mingle with the people. He knew that Nations grow as their commerce and manufactures and agriculture grow, and that all of these grow as the means of transportation are extended. He sought to knit the sections together by their common interest in these great enterprises; and he projected highways and canals as aids not to sectional, but to National development.

But the Nation expanded geographically after the death of Washington far more rapidly than the Nation's means of inter-communication. The small National area of 1789 grew to the great expanse of the Nation of 1860. Even in terms of the crude transportation of that day, the 13 States were but within "driving distance" of each other.

Transportation Problems of Early Days Are Cited.

With the settling and the peopling of the continent to the shores of the Pacific, there developed the problem of self-contained territories because the Nation's expansion exceeded its development of means of transportation. The early building of railroads did not proceed on National lines.

Contrary to belief, the South and the West were not laggard in developing this new form of transportation; but there, as in the East, most of the railroads were local and sectional. It was a chartless procedure; people were not thinking in terms of National transportation or National communication. In the days before the Brothers' War not a single line of railroad was projected from the South to the North; not even one from the South reached to the National Capital itself.

It was an inspired prophet of the South who said: "My brethren, if we know one another, we will love one another." The tragedy of the Nation was that the people did not know one another because they had not the necessary means of visiting one another.

Says Ancient Passions Healed by Two Conflicts.

Two subsequent wars, both with foreign nations, measurably allayed and softened the ancient passions. It has been left to us of this generation to see the healing made permanent.

We are all brothers now in a new understanding. The grain farmers of the West do not set themselves up for preference if we seek at the same time to help the cotton farmers of the South; nor do the tobacco growers complain of discrimination if, at the same time, we help the cattle men of the plains and mountains.

In our planning to lift industry to normal prosperity, the farmer upholds our efforts. And as we give the farmer a long sought equality, the city worker understands and helps. All of us share in whatever good comes to the average man. We know that we all have a stake—a partnership in the Government of our country.

Doom of Sectionalism And Animosity Predicted.

Today we have many means of knowing each other—means that have sounded the doom of sectionalism. It is, I think, as I survey the picture from every angle, a simple fact that the chief hindrance to progress comes from three elements which, thank God, grow less in importance with the growth of a clearer understanding of our purposes on the part of the overwhelming majority. These groups are those who seek to stir up political animosity or to build political advantage by the distortion of facts; those who, by declining to follow the rules of the game, seek to gain an unfair advantage over those who live up to the rules; and those few who still, because they have never been willing to take an interest in their fellow Americans, dwell inside of their own narrow spheres and still represent the selfishness of sectionalism, which has no place in our National life.

Washington and Jefferson and Jackson and Lincoln and Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson sought and worked for a consolidated Nation. You and I have it in our power to attain that great ideal. We can do this by following the peaceful methods prescribed under the broad and resilient provisions of the Constitution of the United States.

Here, in the presence of the spirits of those who fell on this ground, we give renewed assurance that the passions of war are moldering in the tombs of Time and the purposes of peace are flowing in the hearts of a united people.

Georgetown Pays War Dead Tribute

Garnett Speaks at Law School Exercises.

More than 20 students who lost their lives in the World War were honored by impressive ceremonies at Georgetown University Law School yesterday morning.

Bearing a wreath, which they placed before the memorial tablet commemorating the war dead, students heard brief addresses by United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett, a nalumnus of the school, and Brig. Gen. C. E. Kilbourne, chief of the war plans division of the War Department. The services were held under the auspices of the senior class.

A committee of regular and reserve officers, all students, acted as guard of honor.

Rites for C. L. Borst Will Be Held Today

Grafton, W. Va., May 30 (Spl.).—Funeral services will be held tomorrow for Clarence L. Borst, 62, night general yardmaster for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, who died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Nellie Bright, in Washington, Monday. Burial will be in Bluemont Cemetery here.

Mr. Borst was a native of Newburg, W. Va. He was transferred in the Baltimore & Ohio service in 1912 from Keyser to Grafton. He was a member of the Elks, Moose and Baltimore & Ohio Veterans Association.

"National Defense" Discussed.

Westminster, Md., May 30 (Spl.). Speaking on "National Defense," Lieut. Col. T. K. Harrison, Army Quartermaster Corps, was the principal speaker at a meeting of the Westminster Kiwanis Club last night.

patriotic groups holding services there.

Uniformed veterans and brightly attired women of their auxiliaries packed the marble amphitheater in midafternoon to hear Senator Pat McCarran, Nevada, substituting for President Roosevelt, pledge once more the Nation's faith in the causes for which its hero dead gave their lives.

Veterans of '60s Attend.

Gathered with them for the services were some whose memories went back to the War Between the States, in honor of whose dead Memorial Day was established by Gen. Logan in 1868; there were little old ladies, sheltered by parasols from the hot sun, and a pathetically small number of those who had worn the blue, or the gray, during the '60s.

Arlington's green slopes and winding drives were thronged throughout the day; and there was not a grave so humble but that it was marked anew by a tiny flag.

Near the West Gate, the Nation's naval dead were honored in special ceremonies, and a huge floral wreath, representing the old U. S. S. Constitution, was set adrift on the glistening Potomac.

Elsewhere throughout the city, services honoring the memory of the fallen, or of the Nation's great, were held from early morning until night; there were moving Decoration Day exercises at Battle Ground Cemetery, at the Congressional Cemetery, and at Mount Olivet; other shrines were the grave of John Howard Payne, author of "Home, Sweet Home," in Oak Hill Cemetery, and the Titanic Memorial in Potomac Park.

G. A. R. Survivors Ride.

The tramp of marching feet sounded on Pennsylvania avenue as early at 9 a. m., when veterans paraded to the Ellipse. Taking part in the parade were six who marched over the same route in 1865; but this year, the survivors of the G. A. R. rode in automobiles.

At 10-minute intervals, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the American Legion, the Disabled American Veterans of the World War, and the Grand Army of the Republic representatives placed wreaths at the base of the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. At the western base of the shrine lay a wreath of dark laurel—from the White House.

Among those to bring floral tributes to the tomb were the French trans-Atlantic fliers, Capt. Maurice Rossi and Lieut. Paul Codos. Theirs was a wreath embellished with the lilies of France, and the inscription:

"Au soldat inconnu. Ses camarades, Rossi et Codos." (To the Unknown Soldier. His comrades, Rossi and Codos.)

McCarran Voices Confidence.

Senator McCarran, whose address was broadcast over two Nation-wide hook-ups, proclaimed faith in "the fortress of the future" and forecast a United States gaining the respect of the world "by following the teaching of the father of our country—and remaining respectfully aloof."

"By keeping in mind that the nation that governs least governs best," said Senator McCarran, "and maintaining the lawmaking power securely in the people of the several States, and by affording to the lowly and the humble the opportunity for honest effort, we will demonstrate the true mission of democracy in the midst of mankind, and, as each year we pass from out the scenes that surrounud us here today, we may renew the pledge and say to the spirits of our honored soldier dead:

"The giving of your lives was not in vain; with your sealed covenant we break no faith; from your warrior hands we take the torch and hold it high, that in its flare and blaze and light the flag you loved and the principles for which you fought may be indelibly emblazoned on the horizon of our National future.

Democracy to Survive.

"The constitutional democracy that you, by your sacrifice, sought to perpetuate, shall be carried on and we, who survive you, here and now in this, a moment of great National trial, pledge to you to carry on to the end that these United States shall ever be the home of free men, the hearth of mankind's greatest development in democracy's name; and that the organic law for which you strove shall continue to be our text and tenet."

During McCarran's address a squadron of 18 Army bombers roared over the cemetery in formation, dipping their wings in salute and dropping live flowers.

The National anthem and "Recessional" were sung by Hazel Arth; Lincoln's Gettysburg address was recited by Harlan Wood, past department commander of the American Legion, and Daniel E. Campbell, department commander, V. F. W., read Gen. Logan's order establishing Memorial Day. Then the crowd departed to more personal shrines, hundreds carrying flowers to the hillside graves.

Earlier in the day a throng witnessed the exercises conducted by the river bank, where the steamship Constitution, Jr., lay alongside, by Branch 4 of the Fleet Reserve Association. The services were climaxed when the first minute gun sounded from Fort Myer at noon, and a floral wreath was cast adrift from the vessel's quarterdeck.

Health Crusade By Plumbers Termed Vital

Chicago Health Head in Message to Convention Asks Repair Drive.

Delegates attending the fifty-second annual convention of the National Association of Master Plumbers in the Washington Auditorium were urged yesterday in a message from Health Commissioner Herman N. Bundesen, of Chicago, to join with health officials in a Nation-wide crusade against obsolete and defective plumbing.

Because of Dr. Bundesen's inability to attend, his address on "Prevention of Amebic Dysentery by Good Plumbing," was read by Maj. Joel I. Connolly, director of technical service and research of the Chicago Board of Health.

"The outbreak of amebic dysentery in Chicago last year emphasizes the great importance of proper plumbing design and construction in the prevention of this disease," said Dr. Bundesen.

"The plumbing industry throughout the entire country has before it a great opportunity to help make this Nation a safer place to live in.

"There are many buildings in various cities where portions of the sewer piping systems have reached the point where replacement is necessary if public health is to be protected."

The session today will be devoted to codes of fair competition. The speakers will be James D. Dusenberry, assistant deputy administrator of the NRA; Stephen F. Voorhees, of the code authority of the construction industry; Walter J. Kohler, chairman of the code authority of the plumbing fixtures industry; William J. Spillane, of the code committee of the plumbing wholesalers industry, and George H. Drake, chairman of the code committee of the plumbing contracting industry.

The convention will adjourn late tomorrow with the election of officers.

Two Indiana Fliers Die in Flaming Plane

New Castle, Ind., May 30 (AP).—Two men died today in the flaming wreckage of an airplane which fell near Springport, in the northern part of Henry County. The victims were Kenneth Rutherford, 27, pilot, and Homer Wolverton, 22.

The airplane burst into flames while in the air.

British Draft Final Attempt To Settle Debt

U. S. Rejection of Offer Seen Unless President Changes Mind.

Roosevelt Stands Pat, Dooming New Offer

President Roosevelt appeared to have doomed in advance the new British debt proposal expected today.

The forthcoming proposal, as indicated in advance dispatches from London, is expected to consist of an offer of a token payment, on condition that Britain is not labeled a defaulter under the Johnson act.

But President Roosevelt made known yesterday that he will not ask for any new legislation in his war debt message promised before Congress adjourns.

That was taken in Washington to mean that Britain's debt offer must come under the terms of the Johnson act which, leaving no discretion to the President, makes a Nation in default when it failed to make debt payments agreed upon. The Johnson act is construed as making no distinction between no payment and part or token payment, classing it as a default in either case.

Little Hope of Change.

At his press conference yesterday, Mr. Roosevelt emphasized he could not discuss war debts hypothetically and would reserve an expression of opinion until a definite offer was received, which could be referred to the attorney general for a ruling. No such offers have been received so far. Earlier in the course of debt discussions, Mr. Roosevelt made it clear the Johnson act left no discretionary powers with him.

Little hope was entertained in well-informed quarters that a British offer of a token payment would cause the President to ask for powers to waive the default provisions of the Johnson law which bar American credit sources to nations not yet paid up in full. Some observers expressed the belief the purpose of the foreshadowed British offer was to bring the default question out into the open.

Before his departure yesterday the President conferred nearly an hour with Secretary Hull and Undersecretary Phillips. Neither the White House nor the State Department would disclose the nature of the talk, but it is believed it revolved around the wording of the final draft of the coming message. President Roosevelt indicated the message might go up tomorrow despite the fact that he is out of the city, but he refused to make any promises.

Finland Weakening Too.

Regrettable, in some eyes, was the fact the revised debt settlement with Finland, prepared and placed on the President's desk some time ago, appeared likely to turn out stillborn, at least so far as this year is concerned. A few weeks ago it was learned the President planned to send up the Finland settlement separately, but Congressional leaders advised him there would be strong opposition to lightening even Finland's debt burden. The opposition came not so much from an unwillingness to reward Finland for her prompt and faithful meeting of all due dates, as fear such a settlement would serve as a precedent for other downward revisions.

Briefly, the Finland plan envisaged calling all sums paid so far principal and agreeing to accept the remainder of the principal in 30 annual instalments without interest. It would reduce the transaction to the nature of a personal loan between friends, where no thought of charging interest enters the creditor's head.

Close followers thought yesterday the President would probably put over the Finland settlement until the next Congress. They believed he would avoid all danger of a prolonged fight over the war debt problem the last few days of this session.

150 4-H Delegates Due Here June 14

Enrollments Come From Clubs in 40 States.

The country will come to the city June 14 to 20 when 150 young men and women representing the 925,612 members of 4-H clubs throughout the Nation meet in Washington for their eighth National camp.

Representatives will be club members who have completed successfully several years of work on agricultural and homemaking projects. The extension service of the Department of Agriculture has received enrollments from almost 40 States.

Delegates will be welcomed by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, and Secretary of Labor Francis Perkins will believer an address at one of the meetings. Problems of rural youth in a fast moving age will be the topic of the sessions.

France Attacks Reich, England At Arms Parley

Paris Minister Threatens Fate of Conference at Geneva.

Geneva, May 30 (U.P.).—The world's dying disarmament and peace efforts nearly broke up in a fight today.

France bluntly charged Germany with guilt for the conference's patent failure, and the French foreign minister, Louis Barthou, split with the Britsh over procedure.

The practical suggestions for progress toward arms control as the best insurance for peace, offered at the initial session of the reconvened general commission yesterday by the United States and Soviet Russia, were nullified by the speeches of French and British arms delegates this afternoon.

British Foreign Secretary, Sir John Simon, rejected the Soviet plan for a permanent arms conference under auspices of the League of Nations.

Asks Unity Against Reich.

Barthou, getting into the record against France's stand flatly blamed Germany for the failure of disarmament efforts. He said fate of the league was at stake, and pleaded for a united front against Germany's threats to rearm.

He asserted the major powers had reached an agreement last October, but that Germany rejected the draft treaty and quit the conference, paralyzing future efforts. The Germans at the time insisted the powers were refusing to disarm, as provided by the Versailles Treaty. They left Geneva with mutters of rearmament growing to a roar in Berlin.

Barthou's personal quarrel with Sir John Simon, carried on in the corridors all week, culminated in the French diplomat's speech today. He quoted Sir John's earlier declarations against German rearming, and then ironically cited the British statesman's speech today in favor of a return to the British arms memorandum of last January, which permits Germany a moderate rearmament program.

Cites German Budget.

Pounding the rostrum, Barthou cited German budget figures to prove Germany is rearming. He denied the French arms note of April 12 killed the conference, insisting:

"The door is still open—the conference must continue and succeed."

He declared France desired an arms treaty, but repeated she was not willing to compromise on the German rearmament issue or her security demands. Barthou insisted the conference must return to the program under consideration last October, when Germany left Geneva, and added that Germany's 1934 military budget "publicly confirms its rearmament program . . . is it before such a situation we must cede?"

Barthou declared Germany's military credits had increased 160 per cent, while France's had decreased 17 per cent.

"Who menaces Germany?" he asked. "Certainly not France. We menace nobody since the treaties have restored what belongs to us." Barthou said the conference should continue on a basis of reduction of all armaments within a system of security. He concluded with another shot at Britain, asserting the British could aid efforts for an arms pact by giving the necessary security guarantees France demands.

Britain Unwilling to Sign.

Neither Britain nor the United States has as yet been willing to sign a pact including a clause that it would support armed action which France demands before she will scrap a single gun.

Barthou and Sir John were the speakers on the second-day program of the conference which is expected to permit the various powers to go on record prior to debate on whether to continue their faltering arms accord or return their mandate for such a treaty to the council of the league—a move generally regarded as inevitable, possibly by the end of the week, if the speeches can be got out of the way in time.

Sir John, speaking first, rejected the Soviet proposal for a permanent arms commission to carry on the work toward eventual arms control. He recommended the parley reconsider the British draft treaty as supplementary suggestions submitted by five small powers.

He proposed that the conference prepare a series of agreements on chemical warfare, budgetary publicity and establishment of a permanent disarmament commission. These, he said, could be the basis for further meetings and consideration.

The commission adjourned until tomorrow, when other powers' representatives will speak.

1-Gallon Limit Put on Liquor Sales by Mail

New Service Designed as War on Bootleg Until State Stores Open.

Richmond, May 30 (Spl.).—With plans looking toward the opening of two State liquor stores a week until there are at least 100 of all classes, the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board today rushed preparations for a mail order system designed to fil part of the demand until the entire system is in operation.

Mail orders are to be received June 4 and thereafter, and will be filled by express. A transportation fee of 50 cents on all orders will be charged.

The service will be a new assault in the war on bootlegging as well as a means of supplying communities where the board can not establish State stores at once.

Lists Ready June 4.

After June 4 the board will send price lists on request, and, on receipt of orders and remittance plus 50 cents, will express the liquor. One gallon can be filled in one order for spirits. Wines can be supplied in any quantity under the law.

The board opened a new store in Virginia Beach today, and tomorrow a new store is to be opened in Portsmouth. This will bring the total number of State stores to nine—five in Richmond, two in Norfolk and one each in Virginia Beach and Portsmouth.

Operations the first two weeks by four Richmond stores have indicated the State's profits from alcoholic beverages will be well above the $1,650,000 estimate of the Assembly.

Stores Gross $100,000.

The Richmond stores have grossed approximately $100,000 since May 15. Assuming there will be 100 stores and they will average half this, and that the net profit will be 10 per cent, the total profits would be more than $2,000,000 the first year.

Maj. S. Heth Tyler, chairman of the board, has ruled that officers' clubs or like organizations within the State on any Federal Government reservation will be required to obtain licenses for the sale of all intoxicants.

"The Federal statutes themselves," Maj. Tyler said, "provide that where any such club omits to do anything provided in the State law, it is guilty of a misdemeanor."

"Tournament of Roses" Held.

Roanoke, Va., May 30 (Spl.).—A "tournament of roses" judged by the trustees of the American Rose Society was held here today under auspices of the Roanoke Rose Society. The trustees were entertained at a luncheon by garden clubs of Roanoke and vicinity and members of the local rose society.

Danville Delivers Own Bills to Save Postage

Danville, Va., May 30 (Spl.).—The city utilities are saving $2,000 a year by having patrons' bills delivered by their own employes instead of mailing them.

The change was made when postage went to 3 cents and the city continued the practice after the city delivery rate dropped to 2 cents.

Danville, Va., May 30 (Spl.).—Girl graduates at Averett College today received their diplomas at commencement exercises in the college chapel. Dr. F. W. Boatwright, president of the University of Richmond, made the address.

Tribute Is Paid To New Deal At Antietam

Rep. Coffin Is Speaker at Memorial Rites in Battlefield.

Hagerstown, Md., May 30 (Spl.).—Declaring that our present National Administration is the first since the Civil War that has not been dependent upon any one section and class for its existence and support, Representative Thomas C. Coffin, Idaho, speaking at the Memorial Day ceremonies at the battlefield of Antietam, said that our country has returned to the position which it occupied before the War Between the States.

"Our National policies and destinies once again can be directed and controlled by an Administration representing industrial New England and the North and East, as well as the great Southern section, and the great undeveloped West," said the speaker.

"With every new administration, since the Civil War, until the present one, we have been made to feel that sectionalism, born of the war between the States, was one of the controlling features in the elevation of one of our citizens to the Presidency."

The exercises, which followed a parade through Sharpsburg, were held in the National Cemetery at Sharpsburg.

The speakers were introduced by Ellsworth Roulette, Hagerstown city attorney.

Other speakers were former Representative Fred N. Zihlman and Verne E. Chatelaine, chief of the historical division of the Department of the Interior.

The exercises were under the auspices of the G. A. R. Memorial Association of Sharpsburg, of which Clyde B. Roulette is president.

Peery Is Hopeful Of Textile Peace

Governor Feels Hopewell Adjustment Is Near.

Richmond, May 30 (AP).—Gov. Peery today expressed confidence that the points at issue between the workers and the management of the Tubize Chatillon Co., Hopewell textile plant, will be settled at the conference of the National Labor Board in Washington Friday.

The Governor said he saw no reason to expect a strike and added that even should a strike occur he did not believe it would bring disorders such as occurred in Toledo.

Employes of the plant have voted a strike, pending the Washington conference.

Salisbury Masons Visited by Officers

Salisbury, Md., May 30 (Spl.).—Eastern Shore Masonic history was made last night when fifteen officers of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Baltimore visited the local lodge and conferred the third degree.

Masonry here dates back to 1848, when Wicomico Lodge No. 91 was founded, and this is the first time that Salisbury Lodge has been honored with a visit from its grand lodge.

Among those participating were Most Worshipful Grand Master George W. Livingston, Most Worshipful Grand Deacon R. H. Lang and Junior Grand Deacon J. W. Starling, all of Baltimore.

Roanoke Will Test Slot Machine Writ

Roanoke, Va., May 30 (Spl.).—An early court test in Roanoke's war to ban slot machines was forecast today as City Attorney R. C. Jackson said he would collaborate with Commonwealth's Attorney Robert S. Smith in resisting a temporary injunction, issued by Judge John Paul in United States district court, against police interference with operation of the machines.

Mr. Jackson said an answer to the bill probably would be followed by a motion to dissolve the injunction. He pointed out that a State law is involved and added that he saw no reason why Attorney General Abram P. Staples should not take a part in the proceedings.

The restraining order enjoins Police Superintendent J. L. Manning and his assistants from molesting or interfering with the operation of slot machines unless they obviously are used for gambling.

Rites Conducted At Veterans' Plot

Harrisonburg, Va., May 30 (Spl.).—Decoration Day observance here was marked by the first memorial exercises held at the Veterans of Foreign Wars-American Legion burial plot in Woodbine Cemetery. This plot, which contains space for 20 graves, is said to be the first of its kind in Virginia.

United States Commissioner Glenn W. Ruebush, former commander of Rion-Bowman Post, V. F. W., was the speaker. U. L. Fifer, commander of the post, presided.

The memorial exercises of Rockingham Post of the American Legion were held Sunday evening. Commander J. A. Sawhill was the speaker. Confederate Memorial Day will be observed Sunday.

Teacher at Danville, Retiring, Is Honored

Danville, Va., May 30 (Spl.).—Miss Ina Clement, who has taught school for 42 years, was presented a watch by fellow teachers at Bellevue School. She is retiring at the end of the current school session to live in Greensboro, N. C.

For one year she taught in Campbell County, but the rest of her service was in the public schools here. Only once has she been detained from her classes, during that period, by illness. Mrs. A. J. Grady, school principal, made the presentation.

Branch Talks At Dedication Of Postoffice

Defends Farley's Policies at Exercises Held in Danville.

Danville, Va., May 30 (Spl.).—The policies of Postmaster General Farley, especially as they apply to mail contracts, were warmly defended here today by Harllee Branch, Second Assistant Postmaster General, in his address dedicating Danville's new $350,000 postoffice building.

Mr. Farley, he said, immediately upon taking office moved to curb the "heavy deficits" which in some years had amounted to as much as $150,000,000.

Representative Thomas G. Burch, of the Fifth Virginia District, also spoke. On the rostrum was Postmaster Henry Swanson, a brother of the Secretary of the Navy.

A military parade preceded the event and later the veterans of Foreign Wars and their auxiliaries marched to Green Hill Cemetery, where Memorial Day rites were held.

Praises Farley.

Mr. Branch branded as "unfair and inaccurate" any picture of Farley showing him to lack business qualifications or executive ability. He described him as a business executive who, on being appointed to his post, immediately undertook the task of wiping out Postoffice Department deficit and bringing the postal service within the scope of Federal appropriations. He admitted that this had brought some hardships to employes. Increasing revenues and economies, he stated, have made it possible to remove some restrictions.

Indirectly, the speaker alluded to the complaint of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh that the air-mail contracts were abrogated without giving the companies a chance to be heard. He said:

"After the contracts were canceled, the old contractors and those who espoused their cause, among whom were many searching for some point upon which to attack the Administration, loudly proclaimed that the contracts were canceled without a hearing and the contractors convicted and sentenced without the right of trial.

No Court Action Started.

"As a matter of fact, the evidence of fraud and collusion was conclusive and the contractors whose contracts were canceled had the right and still have the right to seek redress in the United States Court of Claims. Not a single one of them has brought any action in this court and I doubt seriously if any of them ever will. I predict here and now that if any of them ever appeals to the Court of Claims that court will rule against them, for there are volumes of evidence which prove that the contracts were fraudulently obtained."

The speaker then went on to show how the Government has saved money by reletting the air-mail contracts.

"As a result of the annulment of the old contracts and the letting of new contracts by competitive bidding, the per annum cost of the air-mail service over a system embracing 28,548 miles—3,300 miles more than were embraced in the old system—will be $7,700,238.80 as compared with $19,400,264.81 in the fiscal year of 1933. The average rate of air-mail pay per airplane mile will be 27.9 cents as compared with approximately 42 cents per airplane mile before the old contracts were annulled," he said.

Labor Violations On Hospital Cited

Roanoke, Va., May 30 (Spl.).—Complaints of alleged violations with reference to employment on the veterans' hospital under construction here, will be made to city council by the Roanoke Central Labor Union, George D. Brewer, president, said.

Mr. Brewer contends that local men have been discharged and Richmond men employed.

Contractors say that with the exception of 10 or 12 employes who came with the firm, all workmen have been supplied by the Virginia State Employment Service through the Roanoke office.

Fishing Commission Will Meet Today

Norfolk, Va., May 30 (Spl.).—The Virginia State Fisheries Commission, headed by Richard Armstrong, of Newport News, will meet tomorrow at Newport News to discuss the recent report made by the State auditor, which resulted in suspension of several fish and oyster inspectors who were found short in their accounts.

The inspectors were employed by the commission and just what the action of the body will be regarding efforts being made to have the men reinstated remains to be seen.

The New Terrace Garden at THE SHOREHAM will open Saturday.

Flowers were dropped by Bolling Field fliers yesterday upon the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington Cemetery, the Nation's focal shrine of Memorial Day services. Senator Pat McCarran, of Nevada, was speaking when a squadron of planes soared overhead in battle formation to pay floral tribute.

Westminster Pythians Select Lodge Officers

Westminster, Md., May 30 (Spl.).—Nomination of officers, which featured a meeting of Charity Lodge, No. 58, Knights of Pythias, Westminster, last night resulted in the following officers being named:

Chancellor commander, George Fringer; vice chancellor, David E. Myers; prelate, M. Brandenberg; master of works, Joseph N. Bowers; keeper of records and seal, H. G. Mathias; master of finance, J. T. Anders, John R. Byers; master of exchequer, Scott Sullivan; master at arms, Harry Melown; inner guard, Woodrow Owings; outer guard, Albert Farver, Norman Hutting, John Magin, Wilbur Englar.

Wicomico County Honors Veterans

Salisbury, Md., May 30 (Spl.).—Two men bent with years, Lambert Holland, 92, and Benjamin White, 96, sole survivors of the Grand Army of the Republic in Wicomico County, occupied the post of honor in the Memorial Day ceremonies here today.

They rode at the head of the Memorial Day parade and occupied seats in a stand with officials in charge of the program sponsored by the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The veterans are thought to be the oldest on the Eastern Shore.

Mrs Nora Millinix Rites Are Conducted

Mount Airy, Md., May 30 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Mrs. Nora Mullinix, who died Sunday at Springfield State Hospital, Sykesville, were held yesterday at the home of her mother, Mrs. Mary Lawson, Damascus.

Survivors include a daughter, Mrs. Bertha Burdette, near Mount Airy; and one son, Smith Mullinix, of Woodstock. The following brothers and sisters also survive: Coschell Lawson and Mrs. Annie Pickett, Damascus; Wesley Lawson and Mrs. Ollie Burdette, Washington, D. C.

Augusta Cadets Will Hear Wise

Rabbi to Speak Sunday at Academy; Program to Start Saturday.

Staunton, Va., May 30 (Spl.).—Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, of New York, will be one of the speakers on the commencement program at Augusta Military Academy, near here.

Rabbi Wise will make the address at the final meeting of the cadet Y. M. C. A. in Old Stone Church next Sunday at 7:30 p. m.

Augusta's program gets under way on Saturday, June 2, final exercises being held on Wednesday, June 6, at 10 a. m.

The alumni association will meet at 4 p. m., June 3. It is expected that about 300 will be present.

Rabbi Wise's address will be made on the forty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the "Y" at the school in 1889 by Mrs. Charles S. Roller, mother of the present co-principals of the institution, Col. Thomas J. Roller and Maj. Charles S. Roller.

Two Washington cadets appear on the program of the final meeting of the Ciceronian Literary Society on the evening of June 4. They are Robert L. Smeltzer and George E. McCann, jr. Both are debaters.

He's 'Gotta Parade' So Judge Relents

Richmond, May 30 (Spl.).—Jefferson Smith, Negro, came into the police court today, dressed in his Army uniform and charged with being drunk.

"Seven dollars and fifty cents," said Justice Elben C. Folkes.

"I haven't got it," replied Smith.

"You'll have to go to jail," Justice Folkes stated.

"But, your Honor," the Negro pleaded, "I want to parade today. I just gotta parade."

"All right, then," Justice Folkes said: "I'll let you parade, but you had better bring $7.50 to the court within a week."

Audit of Highway Body Nears Close

Richmond, May 30 (AP).—Work on the records of the State Highway Department by staff men of the State Auditor of Public Accounts will be completed within the next month, Auditor McCarthy Downs said today.

The auditors have been working in the highway department for many months. It is one of the biggest jobs undertaken. Mr. Downs said the audit involves, literally, millions of transactions.

Mr. Downs said his office is nearing the completion of its present program of auditing State institutions and departments. Meanwhile the first quarterly audit of the new Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board is to be made as of June 30.

Salvage of Trawler Impossible, Owner Quits Virginia in Tears

Norfolk, May 30 (Spl.).—After standing by his stranded craft for more than two months, only to be told she would be a total loss, Leo Favaloro left for Gloucester, Mass., in tears today.

Leo and his brother Frank are Massachusetts fisherman. They saved sufficient money to buy the Nova Julia, a staunch trawler, equipped with modern machinery. Caught in a storm off Currituck, N. C., early in February, she was driven ashore. Coast Guard cutters attempted to float her and failed. A private wrecking company made an attempt and also failed.

Yesterday Leo saw his craft abandoned by the wrecking crew. They said they could not get her back into deep water. She is filled with sand and water.

Leo said he and his brother put all their savings in the boat. She cost so much they did not have money left to pay for insurance.

Leo has been on the beach every day since the day she was driven ashore. He was confident she could be floated, and was dumfounded yesterday when he was told there was no chance.

He left in tears and said he would try to get another boat, while the Nova Julia is just another wreck in the long line strewn from Virginia Beach to Cape Hatteras.

Court Orders Suit In Bank Failure

Richmond, May 30 (AP).—Judge Julian Gunn, in City Circuit Court here, has directed receivers of the defunct American Bank & Trust Co. to institute a new suit against the directors of the former $20,000,000 bank on grounds of negligence.

The order signed by Judge Gunn yesterday authorizes and directs the receivers to bring the action against the directors "by reason of alleged acts of commission and omission, constituting failure of duty." The receivers, Sherlock Bronson, T. Justin Moore and John T. Wilson, the latter acting for the Bank of Commerce & Trusts, state in a report by their counsel that they believe the new suit should "result in substantial recoveries for the estate."

The bank failed to reopen after the Presidential bank holiday last year. Approximately 53,000 depositors were affected.

Kurz Murder Trial Believed Growing Cold

Doctors Believe Brown Will Recover From Attack Injuries.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 30 (Spl.).—Denial of several reports in connection with police investigation into the murder of Miss Fannie Kurz, and the assaulton Milton J. Brown last Sunday night today led to the belief that the trail is "cold."

Authorities denied rumors that Department of Justice operatives have arrested a man said to have been a close friend of Miss Kurz.

Physicians expressed belief for the first time today that Brown would recover. Hospital authorities denied reports that a brain specialist fro mRichmond had performed an emergency operation following a relapse. Doctors said Brown was improving steadily.

Federal authorities and police were believed to be concentrating on the robbery theory.

A fund of $375 has been raised, chiefly through the activity of Benjamin T. Pitts, president of the Fredericksburg Chamber of Commerce, who made the first contribution to the $750 offered by several local sources for arrest and conviction of the criminal, to help Brown defray his hospital expenses.

Goldsborough Hits Munitions Traffic

Snow Hill, Md., May 30 (Spl.).—Private ownership of munitions and the selling of munitions to warring countries were denounced by Representative T. Alan Goldsborough (Democrat), of Maryland in a Memorial Day speech here today.

New York bankers who loaned money to England, France, Germany and Italy, were responsible for the World War, he declared. He also said there was "no such thing as a righteous war, as war always ends in Hell."

Virginia Football Star Seeks $15,000 Auto Crash Damages

Harrisonburg, Va., May 30 (Spl.). Harry Martin, University of Virginia backfield star, has filed suit for $15,000 damages against Carl Spitzer, of Broadway, in Rockingham Circuit Court for injuries received in an automobile crash on the Valley pike eight miles north of here last November.

Martin claims his face was partially crushed and that he suffered various cuts and bruises. He was in the hospital for some weeks and still is taking treatment for dental work. The bill recites that Martin already has expended $700 in medical bills and that an additional $1,200 will be needed before the treatment is completed.

His earning capacity as sales agent of a Washington newspaper at Charlottesville and as the agent for a university boarding house was curtailed at least $640 because of the injuries, the bill claims. The bill also contends that Martin will be put to the extra expense of attending summer school to make up the work he missed.

Martin had spent the week-end at Edinburg and was being driven to Charlottesville by Miss Irene Ring, of Edinburg, when the automobiles collided. Martin alleges that Spitzer turned into the path of Miss Ring's car in an attempt to enter the Broadway-Maryland highway from the Valley pike.

Frederick Boy Hurt By Car Before School

Frederick, Md., May 30 (Spl.).—A. Ridgley Albaugh, 7, was seriously injured by an automobile operated by Harvey Blank as he attempted to cross the street in front of the Parkway School yesterday.

He suffered a fractured jaw, concussion of the brain and lacerations about the face and head. Leaving the school, the boy ran in front of the approaching car. Blank was exonerated.

Cambridge Man Aspires to Judgeship.

Princess Anne, Md., May 30 (Spl.). Emerson Harrington, jr., Cambridge, candidate for the Democratic nominatoin for chief judge, First Judicial Circuit, will address a meeting of the Democratic League of Somerset County at the courthouse here tomorrow.

Harrington's address will be in keeping with the policy of the league of inviting all candidates to appear, Senator Dudley Roe, of Queen Anne County, was the speaker at the last meeting.

The league has a membership of more than 200, and is generally considered favorable to the candidacy of Gov. Ritchie. Dr. S. P. Fuller, Crisfield, is president.

Truckers Consider NRA Order on Pay

Chambersburg, Pa., May 30 (Spl.). Truckers in Franklin and Fulton Counties today were considering how to meet the minimum wages of 37½ cents per hour set for the two counties under the truckers' code.

In an address here W. A. Sutherland, State secretary of the Pennsylvania Motor Truck Association, told the county truckers that helpers and unskilled labor must be paid 35 cents per hour. The maximum week will consist of 48 hours.

Lyle M. Ranson Dead on Coast

Was Son of Harpers Ferry Resident.

Charles Town, W. Va., May 30 (Spl.).—Word was received here yesterday of the death of Lyle M. Ranson, 55, son of Dr. B. B. Ranson, of Harpers Ferry, at his home in Los Angeles.

Mr. Ranson was born near Charles Town in the small community bearing his name. He was a Spanish-American War veteran.

Mr. Ranson is survived by his widow, Mrs. Grace Ryan; his father, Dr. B. B. Ranson, of Harpers Ferry; two sisters, Deaconess Anna L. Ranson Sendai, Japan, and Miss J. O. Ranson, Washington; two brothers, Dr. Brisbane B. Ranson and James Ranson, of Harpers Ferry.

Antietam Bridge Plans Progressing

Waynesboro, Pa., May 30 (Spl.). Franklin County Commissioners yesterday announced they had secured two or three rights of way necessary for the relocation and building of a road and bridge at Antietam Junction, 2 miles south of here on the Hagerstown, Md., road.

The present iron structure crossing the Antietam Creek at the junction of the east and west branches will be replaced with a modern structure, costing $35,000, east of the present bridge. The sharp curve, scene of many accidents, will be eliminated.

The State will pay for approaches to the bridge, while the county will pay for the new bridge and the rights of way.

Sanctuary Societies Plan Festival June 7

St. Martin's and St. Rose's Sanctuary Societies, of Gaithersburg, Md., will hold their annual spring dinner and strawberry festival June 7 for the benefit of the school, in the school auditorium, from 5 until 9 p. m.

Committee members in charge include Mrs. A. V. Hogan, Mrs. E. P. Schwartz, Ernest Gartner, H. L. Diamond, the Misses Hutton, Miss Mary Rome, Mrs. Bernard Duam Diamond, Mrs. J. L. Diamond, Mrs. R. L. Hickerson, Mrs. William Waters, Mrs. Paul Ramsdell, Mrs. Hobart Ramsdell, Miss Eulalie Boland and Miss Mary Baumbacher.

Death Called Suicide.

Elkins, W. Va., May 30 (Spl.).—A suicide verdict was reported today in the case of Walter C. Hartman, 55, Montrose farmer, whose body was found last night with a bullet in the head and a rifle across his knees half a mile from his home. Ill health was believed the cause.

Averett President Is Granted Leave

Danville, Va., May 30 (Spl.).—Dr. J. W. Cammack, for seven years president of Averti College, was granted a six months' leave of absence by the board of trustees yesterday.

One of the trustees, after the meeting, said Dr. Cammack's health has not been good recently and that this was a factor in granting him the furlough. Dr. Cammack several days ago said that he expected to do some post-graduate work. His leave is from June 1, to January 1, 1935.

Reports before the board today showed a continued expansion during the past seven years in enrollment, enlargement of the school plant and in academic scope. Curtis Vance Bishop, vice president, will superintend the college during Dr. Cammack's illness.

Funeral Rites Held For Mrs. Shirley, 76

Luray, Va., May 30 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held yesterday in Page County for Mrs. John T. Shirley, 76, who died Sunday at her home 5 miles west of here.

The following children survive: Mrs. Kemper Burner, Miss Ruth Shirley, of Hampton, Va.; Mrs. H. M. Strickler, Luray, and Zachariah and Thomas Shirley, of Page County.

23 From D. C. Will Graduate At Annapolis

19 Will Enter Service After They Receive Diplomas Today.

Annapolis, Md., May 30 (Spl.).—Of the 23 District of Columbia youths in the class of midshipmen to be graduated from the Naval Academy tomorrow, 17 will be commissioned ensigns in the regular line, two elected to accept commission as second lieutenants in the Marine Corps, and the resignations of four will be accepted by reason of physical disqualification or other causes.

Four hundred and sixty-three midshipmen will be graduated.

A total of 332 will be commissioned ensigns in the Navy, 25 lieutenants in the Marine Corps, one lieutenant in the Philippine Scouts and 105 will resign.

Topping the quartet from Washington who are resigning is John Preston Wiley, first "honor" man, who will enter the employ of an oil company. The others are John C. Green, Robert C. Harbold, jr., an outstanding athlete, and Campbell Pilcher. The two going into the Marine Corps are Frank C. Tharin and Samuel F. Zeiler. The following will be commissioned ensigns: Robert P. Burke, Harold W. Campbell, jr., Douglas L. L. Cordiner, Charles B. Farwell, Mark A. Grant, Gordon A. Griffin, John Harllee, George D. Hoffman, Paul L. Joachim, Richard L. Mann, Irving S. Presler, Reginald Rutherford, Frances W. Scanland, jr., Fletcher L. Sheffield, jr., Frank K. Upham, William W. Walker, and George H. Wigfall.

Ten Virginians.

Virginia has a representation of ten in the class, only one of whom, Creighton L. Wheeler, of Falls Church, is resigning. George C. Ruffin, jr., of Hopewell, is going in the Marine Corps. To be commissioned ensigns are Charles H. Becker, Newport News; James B. Shilson, Norfolk; George M. Clifford, Oatlands; Thomas C. Edrington 3d, and Herman J. Kossler, Portsmouth; Phillip H. Torrey, jr., Quantico; Leslie K. Taylor, Charlottesville, and George E. Katz, Woodstock.

Of the 15 Maryland appointees, two have submitted their resignations, namely, Frank W. Auld and Edward G. Ellenberger, both of Baltimore. The others will be commissioned ensigns as follows: William M. Collins, jr., Chevy Chase; Frank G. Marshall, jr., Rockville; Ernest W. Christensen, Landover; Allen W. Moore, Queen Anne; Robert Donaldson, Thomas H. DuBois, William T. Dutton, Arthur E. Krapf, William R. Smith, 3d, and Thomas W. South, all of Annapolis; Charles H. Clark, Eastport; Warren S. MacLeod and Edward R. Worthington, Baltimore.

Because o fthe observance of Memorial Day there was a complete lull in precommencement activities, save the customary morning and afternoon band concerts.

Farewell Ball.

The farewell ball was given tonight in honor of the graduates by the class of 1935. The ball was held in the spacious armory, or Dahlgren Hall, and was attended by several thousand. Guests were received by Mrs. Hart, wife of Rear Admiral Thomas C. Hart, superintendent, assisted by Midshipman Edward Lawrence Adams, Lynchburg, Va., chairman of the ball committee.

Commencement exercises will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow. Superintendent Hart will deliver the principal address and diplomats will be presented by Rear Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of the Bureau of Navigation.

Johns Hopkins Students Face Expulsion for Terrapin Theft

Men Who Raided U. of Md. Are Reported to Be Known.

Johns Hopkins University will expel those students who stole (and later returned) the University of Maryland's $2,000 bronze terrapin model, "if Johns Hopkins can find the men," Maryland University was told yesterday.

If Johns Hopkins University "can't find those men," the Baltimore institution was told, "the University of Maryland will tell Johns Hopkins who they are."

Estimates as to how much it will cost to replace the 600-pound terrapin on its sandstone base in front of Ritchie Coliseum range from $25 to $65. And Maryland University wants to know "who's going to pay the bill."

The model was taken early Tuesday, one year after it was unveiled by the school mascot, a Crisfield (Md.) terrapin that posed for the molding of the effigy.

Ralph Williams, director of freshmen activities at Maryland University, was said yesterday to have definitely located the Johns Hopkins students who took the model. He trailed them through a Berwyn, Md., garage attendant who said six students stopped at his garage, one with a smashed hand, early Tuesday.

Tydings Fans Growing Fire Against Ritchie

Opposes Fifth Term for Governor to Clear Own Path in '38.

Democratic victory and to "save the Governor from himself"—which Ritchie does not seemingly appreciate—the opinion is general that the Senator has done some serious thinking about 1938, when he comes up for reelection. If Ritchie is reelected Governor, his fifth term would expire at the end of 1938 tion fears—he might decide then to and—it is believed the Tydings factun for the Senate against Tydings.

Radcliffe, although he has never sought elective office, is popular throughout Maryland. He served as secretary of State, an appointive office, when Ritchie was attorney general. The President had to draft him for the PWA administrator appointment. He was the Roosevelt campaign manager in Maryland in 1932.

For years Radcliffe has been associated with the Fidelity & Deposit Co., serving as senior vice president of that company when Franklin D. Roosevelt, after his defeat for the Vice Presidency in 1920, became the company's New York vice president. Thus Radcliffe is known as "the President's former boss."

Despite the close friendship between Roosevelt and Radcliffe, the President has had nothing to do withm injection of his name into the Maryland situation.

to permit the use of his name as a compromise candidate for Governor. Radcliffe, who several months ago treated lightly mention of his name as a gubernatorial candidate, apparently consented.

Tydings' next move was to inspire a demand for Ritchie and Jackson to retire and for Radcliffe to run. This demand came earlier this week from 12 Democratic leaders in seven Eastern Shore counties, where Ritchie is regarded as weakest. Subsequently leaders in two Western Shore counties joined the movement.

Ritchie in Countermove.

The Ritchie camp last week got wind of what Tydings was doing and of the forthcoming Eastern Shore petition. In order to offset its psychological effect, they quickly called a meeting of Baltimore City ward and precinct executives favorable to the Ritchie candidacy as a "display of strength." Leaders of 24 of the 28 city wards appeared at the meeting, with their lieutenants.

The petition of the Eastern Shore counties asserted that Ritchie was strong in Baltimore, but weak in the counties and that Jackson was weak in the city. Thus they held that unless both withdrew and Radcliffe became the party's candidate, Democracy's hold on Maryland would be jeopardized in November and that even if the statewide ticket were elected, local Democratic tickets might go down to defeat.

Although Radcliffe in substance confined his reaction to this petition by saying he would give the matter "serious and careful thought," word was given out that he would run if Ritchie and Jackson retired. Tydings immediately issued a statement applauding the Eastern Shore movement, lauding Radcliffe and suggesting that it would be proper to let Ritchie have the Senatorial nomination.

Ritchie, Jackson Stand Pat.

Ritchie said he had no intention of quitting his race. Jackson said he was in the fight to stay. Meanwhile, the Tydings faction has turned its attention to gathering a few more faggots, in the way of statements from Democratic leaders, for the fire they have started.

Meanwhile, former Senator William Cabell Bruce has announced that he has definitely abandoned his desire to go back to the Senate and his nephew, Democratic National Committeeman Howard Bruce, remains silent about his aspirations for a Senate seat. Other Democratic aspirants for that honor are holding back, leaving the Senatorial candidacy open for Ritchie should he change his mind.

The best objective opinion available in Maryland is that Ritchie will sit tight, and so will Jackson until one eliminates the other in the September primary. Should Tydings, however, succeed in forcing Ritchie out of the gubernatorial race into running for the Senate, there is no doubt but that Tydings would become the State Democratic leader.

Tydings "For the Party."

Although Tydings contends he is actuated only by a desire for a

Negro Miners Held For Hurling Bomb

Birmingham, Ala., May 30 (AP).—Two striking Negro ore miners were arrested here today on a charge of having thrown a dynamite bomb at the home of a nonunion miner last night.

The negroes, Eugene Calhoun, 31, and James Thomas, 27, were held without bond. Under Alabama criminal laws, bombing a residence is punishable by a prison term of not less than ten years or by death.

Luke Lea, Sr., Given Job in Penitentiary

Raleigh, N. C., May 30 (AP).—Luke Lea, sr., former U. S. Senator from Tennessee, serving a six-to-ten-year sentence here for violation of the State banking laws, has been taken off the prison "unemployed list."

Warden H. H. Honeycutt revealed that the prisoner, admitted a few weeks ago, had been assigned the job of checking materials as they arrive for remodeling and fireproofing the half-century old prison.

Illegal Fishing Draws Fines.

Romney, W. Va., May 30 (Spl.).—G. C. DeHaven, E. L. Luttrell and A. G. Luttrell, all of Martinsburg, W. Va., were tried before Justice T. E. Pownall here on a charge of fishing in a closed stream and each fined $10 and costs.

Tugs Quit Norfolk With Coal Barges

Norfolk, Va., May 30 (Spl.).—Held in port for more than 48 hours by northeast winds and high seas, six tugs towing 20 barges steamed out of Hampton Roads today bound for Boston and other points in New England and New York. The barges were loaded with coal from Norfolk and Newport News.

The tugs towing this great fleet of coal carriers were the Menomonie, P. F. Martin, Eureka, Goliath, Nassau and Wellfleet. The barges were loaded with an average of 3,500 tons each and represented one of the largest coal movements in this type of craft to move out of Hampton Roads in several months. The passing of this fleet to sea took place between 11:30 a. m. and 2 p. m.

Cuba Comes Of Age.

Abrogation of the so-called Platt Amendment is the second step taken by the Roosevelt Administration toward the rehabilitation of Cuba. The first step—an act designed to stabilize the sugar industry by assigning quotas to all groups of producers supplying the American market—was primarily economic. The new treaty signed at the Department of State on Tuesday is a truly significant advance along the political front.

Opinions differ widely as to the value of the Platt Amendment during the early years of the Cuban Republic. But it is quite generally conceded that its guarantee against impairment of Cuban independence by foreign powers; its grant of intervention rights to the United States for the preservation of peace in the island, and its restrictions upon Cuban finance are now out of date. Conditions, both in Cuba and the world, have changed greatly since this abridgment of sovereignty was forced upon the new government at Havana in 1903. Cuban independence is not now endangered, and the recent revolution has in some respects emphasized the ability of the Cuban people to manage their own affairs.

In a recent study sponsored by the Brookings Institution Philip G. Wright pointed out that the Platt Amendment made life and property more secure in Cuba and thus, paradoxically, brought about unbalanced economic development. For many years this arrangement was interpreted as a guarantee by the United States of protection for American investors in the island, while the reciprocity treaty gave assurance of a market in this country for Cuban products. Consequently, the sugar industry was overdeveloped with American money. When the price of sugar fell below the cost of production during the critical years of 1932 and 1933 an economic collapse was unavoidable.

Many of Cuba's major difficulties may be traced to this abnormal stimulation of a single industry under protection of the American Government. It is chiefly this factor which has given the United States a special obligation to help Cuba pull out of her current difficulties, economic as well as political. The Roosevelt Administration has manifested a keen appreciation of this responsibility. By eliminating those provisions of the treaty which have always been repugnant to the Cuban people a new basis of understanding and friendly relations has been established, the influence of which will extend throughout Latin America.

The new treaty is much more significant, however, in Havana than in Washington. Our Government has relinquished its special obligations toward Cuba. The Mendieta government has assumed onerous new responsibilities. It is now up to the authorities at Havana to develop a rehabilitation program that will not be dependent upon a virtual guarantee of capital by a foreign power, nor upon the unlimited absorption of sugar by the American market.

The New Deal In Spoils.

Few more serious indictments have been leveled against the Administration than the annual report of the Civil Service Reform League. "The spoils system," says this current document, "is still a major problem." When flagrant abuses under this system are coupled with the extension of government into ever-widening fields of state control, it is not surprising that independent, nonpartisan agencies should express their concern forcibly.

"The word 'bureaucracy' has a menacing sound to American ears," says the report. "But it is far more of a menace if the bureaucracy is to be administered through haphazard, hit-or-miss political systems . . . The tremendous responsibilities which the New Deal has placed upon government are too heavy for the handling of such amateurs, whose greatest qualification is that they were 'for Roosevelt before Chicago.'"

In effect, Secretary Morgenthau substantiates this indictment by suspending six employes of the Bureau of Internal Revenue on charges of mixing politics with the collection of taxes.

Congress has taken the leadership in this assault upon the merit system. It exempted all of the "recovery" agencies from rules of the classified civil service. It deliberately refused to eliminate politics from the Home Owners Loan Corporation, described by the Civil Service Reform League as a "politician's happy hunting ground." According to the league, the pay roll of this vast business organization "became a dole to political henchmen who could not be 'taken care of' in more discriminating bureaus." Congress was apprised of that fact, and the President indorsed the Norris amendment designed to eliminate politics from the selection of HOLC personnel. But the spoils system triumphed.

The league regards the recent order for examination of "presidential" postmasters "as a sham and a mere cloak for the spoils system." It links the postal deficit with the spoils system in that department, and calls attention to the fact that "the Postmaster General has publicly taken no steps to carry out the President's instructions" to prepare a bill bringing all postmasters under civil service. What else could be expected with the chief distributor of spoils serving as Postmaster General?

In theory the President enthusiastically indorses the merit system. In practice spoilsmen are permitted to run riot in the organizations which have been set up to lift the country out of depression. Under these circumstances the Civil Service League's concern over "extravagant, blundering machinery motivated by waste, favoritism and inefficiency" is shared by an increasing number of those who at the outset held high hopes for the "New Deal."

Clarifying The Issue.

Norman Davis and Maxim Litvinoff, spokesmen of the two nations best able to pursue a policy of isolation, have brought before the reconvened Disarmament Conference two sharply different proposals for further procedure. Between them they have posed the issue which confronts the world and sounded an urgent call for that clear thinking on fundamentals without which the drift toward another world war may easily continue to ultimate disaster.

On several major points the suggestions made by Ambassador Davis and Commissar Litvinoff are mutually contradictory. And it is just because of this fact, because these two delegates have outlined policies between which the world must choose, unless it really prefers the fatal alternative of drift, that the present gathering at Geneva assumes momentous significance. Succeeding speeches before the conference, it may be anticipated, will tend to create a clear alignment of opinion behind either the American or the Russian thesis.

The American proposal is summed up by the statement of Mr. Davis that "we have no new cures to offer." And this is emphasized by reiteration of the intention to avoid any form of collective action which could involve the United States in concerted action against an aggressor. This country, says our envoy at Geneva, "will not participate in European political negotiations and settlements, and will not make any commitment whatever to use its armed forces for the settlement of any dispute anywhere."

While the United States thus again sets its face against development of the theory of joint international action against an aggressor, Mr. Davis shows clearly that the Administration favors increasingly close cooperation with the League system.

He reiterates the previously expressed willingness to consult with other nations on any threat to peace, as part of a general disarmament settlement. He lets it be understood that we would play an active part in supervising the operation of a disarmament treaty. He shows that we are as willing as ever to reduce our own military equipment if others will follow suit. And to this he adds a far-reaching pledge to join in measures for effective regulation of the private trade in arms and munitions, a pledge which is given emphasis by our independent application of a prohibition on military exports to Bolivia and Paraguay.

Within the limits prescribed by preservation of independence of action, in other words, the United States has stretched its traditions in offering cooperation for the preservation of world peace. In effect this is also the predominant British attitude: international cooperation to the extent that complete freedom of national action is preserved.

But it is not the attitude of the school which Russia is prepared to lead, judging by Mr. Litvinoff's remarkable proposals. For what the Soviet Commissar for Foreign Affairs suggests is "a graduated scale of sanctions" applicable by the League of Nations to a nation defined as an aggressor against world peace. And in setting forth this plan Mr. Litvinoff does not hesitate to contradict the assertion of Mr. Davis that "there are two ways and only two conceivable ways to achieve security." These were defined by the American delegate as (1) national armament at individual will and (2) progressive abolition, through agreement, of weapons suitable for offensive warfare. To these alternatives the Russian envoy adds the third method of collective punitive action against a State defined by appropriate findings as an aggressor. It is a method which France has always favored, and may be expected to support with renewed vigor now.

The issue is thus drawn between two schools of thought which have long been in process of development—the school which thinks that world peace can be secured by unenforceable agreements and the school which believes that something comparable to an international police force must be developed as a preliminary to disarmament. It is ironic that the latter school, now led by Russia, had its first important advocacy in the wartime principles of the American League to Enforce Peace. It is ironic that what Litvinoff now suggests is making effective the dead-letter sanctions articles which President Wilson helped to write into the League Covenant. And it is particularly ironic that Soviet Russia, which so long accused the League as being a "tool of capitalism," should now come to Geneva to urge a set of formidable teeth for an organ which it long mistrusted and feared.

But times change, and with them national attitudes. Russia is preparing to enter the League which she once condemned and the United States is possibly less anxious than ever before to make effective the far-reaching covenant which an American President sponsored. The reasons for present attitudes can be found in the different international problems of the two countries—the main objective of Russia and France being to avert the threat of impending war, and that of the United States and Great Britain being to keep out of such hostilities if they come.

Possibly the attitude of these two groups of powers can be reconciled during forthcoming discussions at Geneva. Certainly the various national reactions to the Davis and Litvinoff proposals will be eagerly awaited. And, regardless of individual viewpoints, everyone can at least be grateful that a conference which seemed moribund has been sharply snapped back to confront the fundamental question with regard to the institution of war: what price will the nations pay to outlaw it in fact as well as name?

The Arkansas Decision.

When the United States Supreme Court in a now famous 5 to 4 decision upheld the constitutionality of a Minnesota mortgage law establishing a temporary moratorium on foreclosures, the dissenting minority expressed a fear that it would set up a precedent for "future gradual but ever-advancing encroachments upon the sanctity of private and public contracts."

The unanimously adverse decision in the Arkansas case will go far toward reassuring those private citizens who had shared the fears of Justice Sutherland and his colleagues, because it shows that the majority members of the court are prepared to draw a sharp line between temporary legislation limited to the period of the emergency which called it forth, and laws ostensibly of an emergency nature containing "no restriction with respect to particular circumstances or relations." Arkansas, for example, had undertaken to exempt the proceeds of life insurance policies from seizure for debt, without limiting such exemption. In the Minnesota mortgage case, on the other hand, the legislation had merely extended the period of redemption in foreclosure sales.

Public interest will be focused upon the views expressed by the five judges who upheld the Minnesota law, since they are in a position to overrule the minority who maintain that there is no "substantial difference between the Minnesota and Arkansas cases." The legalistic merits of this rigid interpretation of the Constitutional prohibition upon State impairment of the obligation of contract may be left to the lawyers. The public at large is chiefly concerned with the conditions under which the Supreme Court is prepared to sustain State laws that temporarily impair contractual rights.

In the Minnesota case, Chief Justice Hughes said: "It can not be maintained that the Constitutional prohibition should be so construed as to prevent limited and temporary interpositions with respect to the enforcement of contracts, if made necessary by a great public calamity, such as fire, flood, or earthquake. . . . And if State power exists to give temporary relief from the enforcement of contracts in the presence of disasters due to physical causes . . . that power can not be said to be nonexistent when the urgent public need demanding such relief is produced by other and economic causes."

The court's position has been further defined in the Arkansas opinion, since the majority has made it clear that it will not uphold "emergency" State laws that make permanent inroads upon constitutionally guaranteed rights. "The relief afforded," it is said, "must have reasonable relation to the legitimate end to which the State is entitled to direct its legislation."

In the absence of any constitutional prohibition upon the passage of Federal laws impairing the obligation of contract, it would be hazardous to anticipate the trend of decisions relating to the validity of Federal emergency laws. But the Supreme Court has drawn an important distinction between temporary and permanent legislation which offers assurance to the country that it will not permit the so-called emergency character of the New Deal legislation to become a blanket argument in favor of sustaining laws that impair guaranteed rights.

Not Always!

The Russell divorce suit is another example of the truth that theorists in happiness have no better chance of securing it than ordinary folk—and probably less. This Earl and his Countess, who have preferred to be known as simple Bertrand and Dora, had acquired a vogue because of their books and lectures in favor of "freedom" within marriage.

"With the economic independence of women," preached the philosophic Earl, "marriage, as it has existed since men took to agriculture, is likely to end. By permitting a husband and wife a few adventures . . . we abolish the divorce menace." He was wrong in his own case, it seems, but not so wrong as his economically independent wife was in hers. For, she once declared, "complete inexperience is inadvisable . . . I would not insist on absolute faithfulness after marriage." Now she sues her thrice-married husband for divorce on the ground of infidelity; he will not, it is announced, deny the impeachment by contesting the suit—and few will assume that a pair of such eminent reformers would cheat the law by pretending grounds which have no reality in fact.

Most matrimonial voyages are still undertaken and conducted by dead-reckoning, but divorces, despite their growth, do not yet outnumber weddings. This marriage of the Russells, on the other hand, was supposed to have been begun and carried on upon highly scientific lines. The noble pair announced their firm belief that, in the relation between husband and wife as much as elsewhere, the Latin adage holds good: "Experientia docet"—experience teaches. Apparently the answer is: Not always!

The Case of Judge Cobb.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On behalf of the General Alumni Association of Howard University and as editor of the Howard Alumni Journal I extend to you with deepest gratitude our sincere thanks for your recent editorial concerning Judge James A. Cobb and advocating his reappointment.

Our office on the Howard campus is always on the pulse of the more than 22,000 living Howard alumni and we know they not only regard Judge Cobb as the most distinguished law alumnus of Howard University, but unquestionably the best fitted and most completely qualified member of our race available for the position in question.

We have been drawn much closer to The Washington Post because of the Judge Cobb editorial. Best wishes for the prosperity of your newspaper.

MISHAEL (CASEY) JONES.
Manager, Alumni Journal, Howard University.
Washington, May 25.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial of May 22 relative to the municipal court judgeship entitled "The Case of Judge Cobb," serves after a fashion to bring to mind an old Japanese proverb—"At the foot of the lighthouse is darkness!" Passed for the time being, is the tribute you so graciously pay Mr. Cobb.

When you say, "It has been freely admitted that another colored jurist measuring up to Judge Cobb's standards can not be found in Washington," you make this proverb a reality. It is difficult to understand to whom responsibility goes for the generous, conscientious minds admitting so freely the fact that Washington has only one colored lawyer capable of filling a place on the municipal court bench.

There are more than 125 colored lawyers in this city. Some of these are engaged as teachers in law schools, others have engaged, daily, in the practice of law for many years. Among the latter are those with more years of practice and experience than had Mr. Cobb before he came to the bench. Without prejudice to Mr. Cobb many people of color will and do resent deeply your imputations.

While you may decry the political aspect of the situation, a close study of the psychology of the situation and condition of those involved should write another story. Every man and woman in any profession idealizes some high point of distinction as a capstone climaxing a career. To the colored lawyer of Washington this place may be considered his. Those, then, suggesting another at this time for the honor, had a conscientious pride in their lawyers to the end that they do not believe that any one man has absorbed all the elements of success and service and is alone entitled to an exclusive exhibit. Rather they realize the scarcity of places and opportunity where preparation and hard work can merit recognition with honor.

Few men, white or colored, attain the bench with the same qualifications and attributes evidenced after years of sitting. Weighing that fact is it to be believed that you believe no other colored man in Washington can reach or acquire a record of efficient, meritorious service now claimed for Judge Cobb exclusively?

The foregoing is mainly to discuss principles not men. Mr. Cobb has enjoyed the plaudits and admiration of his people, unstintedly and without reservation. They are grateful to you and yours for the compliments paid him. They are as sincere in this as they are in the expressions of resentment when there is an attempt to cast insinuations that efficiency, ability and those things essential to competency in service are embodied in any one man of their group, exclusively, as in contrast to any similar situation in any other group of Americans.

Answers "Clarion Call."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Paul V. Murray in your paper of May 15, issued what he called a clarion call for me to write another letter on the subject of birth control. Apparently he missed the whole point of my former letter. At the risk of being a little irksome I shall reiterate it in different language.

Mr. Murray believes that birth control is a sin, or "an insult to God" as he expressed it in a former letters, whereas many others do not. Personally, I have no fixed notions about the morality of birth control as such; moreover, I am not interested in that matter. But I am interested in the kind of Federal laws which we have.

Our present Federal legislation preventing the dissemination of birth control information was enacted to appease those who held Mr. Murray's views that birth control is "an insult to God." Believing in freedom of conscience, toleration and enlightenment, I am of the opinion that these laws should be repealed, that everyone should be allowed freedom of conscience, that access to information should be available to all, and that folks should be allowed to regulate the size of their families as they please.

A Very Pleasing Orchid.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An orchid to the writer of your column, "The Post Impressionist." At the College of William and Mary here we have commented upon this feature in journalism classes. What we like is its originality in subject. The author does not try to be highbrow to impress up with his knowledge (which is evident). Neither does he write down to his reader.

The author seems to be well versed in the arts, literature, and theology. He writes of something timely, and yet different. His style is fresh and invigorating. We would like to see the author's name at the head of his column.

"Sangerism" vs. War.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: All sane persons hate war, believing it to be a senseless, heartless and futile method of settling a controversy. Believing as I do that limitation of offspring will do much to hinder, to prevent war, I am in favor of "Sangerism." Trade and territory lie at the bottom of wars of aggression; trade and territory are essential to provide for overpopulation of a country—hence war. To this extent only, does "Sangerism" appeal to me.

The Real Issue.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I, for one, am thoroughly tired of hearing Messrs. Sullivan, Mills, et al., explain the processes of Dr. Tugwell's mind. If Dr. Tugwell can milk a cow faster than any one else, I am willing to concede his ability. But what Dr. Tugwell thinks of a fuller life and the needs of the proletariat leaves me cold as a jellyfish. His job at present is agriculture. "Shoemaker, stick to your last!"

To judge from the utterances of Ogden Mills and others, he is a Lenin, who by the brilliancy of his mind and some occult power is stealing away the liberties of the average U. S. citizen. As a matter of fact, he is stealing nothing at all, but is merely confusing a lot of politicians and making monkeys of them through trying to answer him.

It matters little what Dr. Tugwell's views on social reforms may be. The fact is that the American people must vote on the proposition to amend the Constitution to give the Government powers, or to retain it as it is. Emergency or not, there is no other issue before the American people. All else is folderol. C. E. CARPENTER.

Race Discrimination.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial on social versus economic conditions reminds us that we must exist before we can live. Theoretically, when our own toes are not stepped on, most of us agree that each citizen is entitled to earn a decent living; but it has always been the practice of the dominant race to arrogate to itself most of the wealth of the country, whether in special rights, lucrative positions or trade advantages. Note how in practice the trade unions exclude the Negro.

To prove its sincerity, let our Government change the Civil Service rules so that the thumb print is substituted for the photo, as a means of identification; that all reference to race of applicants be dropped, and that to fill all vacancies, only one—the top of the list of eligibles—be certified.

Free Speech?

The excuse given by Christian County, Ill., deputies for refusing to permit Norman Thomas to address an open-air meeting was that there have been so many mine riots in recent months that outdoor gatherings have been prohibited.

What Mr. Thomas' speech in behalf of a candidate for Congress had to do with the miners' strikes some months back is not quite clear, but in any event the deputies went about their self-imposed duties of keeping the populace pure in a pretty high-handed fashion.

Apparently it was a perfectly well-behaved throng that had convened to hear the speakers. Apparently neither Mr. Thomas nor his candidate-protege had any intention of inciting the audience to any sort of action other than mental. And yet under the "ruling" of Taylorville, Ill., officials against public meetings, Mr. Thomas was arrested (without charge) and the crowd waiting to hear him was peppered with tear gas bombs.

Of course, the Christian County people will survive, even though they didn't hear the speakers. But that is hardly the point. The important thing is that restrictions against free speech always tend to become tyrannical and unjust, especially in the hands of club-swinging and sometimes selfishly motivated police agencies.

(The deputy who arrested Thomas is a candidate for sheriff on the Republican, not Socialist, ticket.)

Maryland, His Maryland!

Postoffice, Thursday.

WE hope that, some time during Maryland's tercentenary celebration, one of the participating organizations will republish a certain volume of which few copies are now extant. Because the text of this book, though issued after the American Revolution, was written before it, foretold the event and blamed the religionists of Maryland for much of what was to happen:

A
of the Causes and Consequences of the American Revolution;
in Thirteen Discourses,
Preached in North America between the Years 1763 and 1775;
With An Historical Preface—
By
Jonathan Boucher, A. M., F. A. S.
Vicar of Epsom in the County of Surrey.
London:
MDCCXCVII.

Like most collections of truths, this is a collection of paradoxes. The prophet of revolution opposed it. He was a Church of England clergyman preaching to Maryland congregations. He took his manuscript sermons home before hostility became war. And, when he published them, he dedicated them to George Washington.

Not that he had been converted to anything. By word of mouth, he had sought to turn American representatives of the Crown toward more circumspect methods. By publication, he seems merely to have indulged the human desire of saying "I told you so." He assures Mr. Washington:

"As a British subject, I have observed with pleasure that the form of government, under which you and your fellow citizens now hope to find peace and happiness, however defective in many respects, has, in the unity of its executive, and the division of it's legislative, powers, been framed after a British model."

Established Churchman Boucher thought the Catholics in America were becoming a force for separation; he wanted that force directed into some safer channel. They were mostly Stuart supporters, opposed to the reigning House of Hanover. Yet, as Stuart men, they should be monarchists in principle. Why not win them to the Crown?

As things were, he found even Protestant Marylanders entrusting their children's education to such people, and he scented secret instruction in anti-British sentiment. In 1773, there was a plan to consolidate "the three free schools of the three contiguous counties of which Charles is the central." The Governor and Council would attend a service at the Church of Port Tobacco, where Mr. Boucher would preach.

He prepared a sermon in which he declared that Anglican Marylanders were culpably "indifferent who educates their children so long as they themselves have not the trouble"—that non-Anglicans had "almost monopolized the instruction of youth"—that "not a ship arrives with redemptioners in which schoolmasters are not advertised for sale." He broadly intimated that these were Catholics embittered against the Crown because the Crown had dispossessed them. And he proposed that every Maryland teacher should take such an oath as that administered in the Irish Charity Schools:

"I do heartily acknowledge His Majesty King George to be the only rightful and lawful King of these Realms and will * * * educate the children committed to my charge in a true sense of their duty to him."

The Governor and Council were prevented from listening to that sermon, "owing to some embarrassments in government, which even then were such as to excite very serious apprehensions." And Mr. Boucher's advice went unheeded.

Aside from this matter of the schoolmasters, however, Mr. Boucher was a good Marylander in his toleration. He thought that, even in the colony of his labors, and certainly throughout most of the colonies, the monarchist Protestants were making a political as well as an ethical error by showing social prejudice against the Catholics—making, in short, republicans. He said so in a sermon "preached in Queen Anne's Parish, Prince Georges County, in the year 1774."

He notes that "violent resolves" have just been taken by county committees "against Papists:"

"The ill treatment which they (the Catholics) everywhere receive from us is everywhere disgraceful; but it more particularly ill becomes the people of this Province, which was settled by Catholics. . . . The first settlers of Maryland were . . . persons of family and fortune, who still possess some of the best lands . . . If the good sense and piety of the Papists would permit them to avail themselves of the means that are in their power, they are not altogether destitute of all redress . . . All sound policy must be directed against provoking such a people to become our enemies."

But Mr. Boucher, in his notes to this sermon, says that he was again unheeded. "At length a Catholic gentleman, possessed of one of the first fortunes in that country, openly espoused the cause of Congress (and) under so respectable a leader as Mr. Carroll, all (the Catholics) soon became good Whigs."

However, Mr. Boucher has one consolation. Unlike revolutionary France, America, Protestant and Papist, at least remained religious. The "best friends of mankind," says he, are those who "amidst the din and uproar of Utopian reforms, persist to think that the affairs of this world can never be well administered by men trained to disregard the God who made it."

Cause for Thinking.

Of all the thinking Thinker Tugwell has ever done in his life he is probably engaged in the most ponderous thinking right now. Just why it is that the welfare of the people should be tied up with a United States marshal in South Carolina, or mayhap two United States marshals in South Carolina, is something that has never been covered by the books, not even in Frank Kent's "Great Game of Politics."

They have manifestly come to be interrelated—interdependent, in fact—the one closely associated with the other. It is somthing that Thinker Tugwell simply can not think out.

BARGERON.

The result is a decided slowing up in the march toward the "more abundant life," hesitancy in a thing that seemed to be moving along so easily as not to cause the thinkers any trouble at all.

* * * *

The situation is this: Obviously we are not going to make any further headway toward the promised land unless Thinker Tugwell is made an Undersecretary of Agriculture instead of Assistant Secretary at an increase of some $2,500 a year. That this is essential toward further progress, no one should have any reason to doubt. It is an integral part of the progress, so to speak; in fact, it is a concomitant of the "more abundant life."

There is no purpose to be served in our questioning this. A fine bunch of people we would be, indeed, were we to show any inclination to do so. Sufficient it should be for us that we get the "more abundant life" without worrying about the pay or the title of those who give it to us.

* * * *

But it develops that Thinker Tugwell can not be an Undersecretary of Agriculture, or so it seems as of today, unless Senator Ellison Smith is given the patronage of a United States marshal, or maybe two marshals, in South Carolina. Senator Ellison Smith says he is against Thinker Tugwell's elevation because the latter is not a dirt farmer. The impression seems to be general among those concerned, however, that the Senator is not so much concerned about the Undersecretary being a dirt farmer as he is about getting the marshal patronage in South Carolina.

Therefore, the elevation of Thinker Tugwell seems to hinge upon the Senator's getting this patronage. Accepting the proposition that the Thinker's elevation is essential to the welfare of the people, we can readily see how the fate of a people is wrapped up with a marshal or so down in South Carolina. It seems like a small thing to have a people's welfare held up on, but still smaller things have influenced the destinies of people in the past.

* * * *

As I said before, the Thinker is finding it difficult to think out what should be done. Here is an unforeseen interruption in the "more abundant life" plan, the most serious one which the planners have yet encountered.

To appreciate its full importance one must understand that the plans for the "more abundant life" are the result of years and years of the most serious academic study. They have gone through the laboratory of the books. Every detail had been worked out, a patch made here and a patch made there, as the thing was touched up to include every new idea. There have been those to say that in its final form the plan looks like a crazy quilt, but this is not because of any haphazardness on the part of the planners. Rather it is because they were so painstaking and so conscientious as to detail that they went over the thing, rubbed out here and put in there, in an attempt to make it the perfect plan.

Then at this late date, after all the studying they had done, to realize they had overlooked Senator Ellison Smith and a marshal or so in South Carolina, throws them off. It is an obstacle entirely unexpected and unforeseen. It sort of throws the thinkers off their stride.

Church Group Closes Convention at Roanoke

Roanoke, Va., May 30 (Spl.).—A three-day convention of ministers and laymen of the Virginia zone of the Church of the Nazarene ended here today.

Delegates attended from Richmond, Norfolk, Charlottesville and other cities. Speakers included the Rev. C. B. Cox, Franklin, Ohio; the Rev. H. A. Forester, Richmond; the Rev. R. E. Dobie, Roanoke; Mrs. Theodore Ludwig, Roanoke, and the Rev. E. L. Hess, Roanoke.

Hagerstown Child, 7, Killed by Milk Truck

Hagerstown, Md., May 30 (Spl.).—Anna Poffenberger, 7, living near Keedysville, was killed last night by a milk truck driven by Ralph Taylor, jr., a short distance from her home.

Taylor swerved and upset the truck to avoid hitting the child, who, he said, walked into the side of the machine.

2,500 Sailors Parade In Norfolk Celebration

Norfolk, Va., May 30 (Spl.).—With 2,500 Navy men from the Norfolk naval base and the new airplane carrier Ranger in line, the Memorial Day parade here was the largest in years.

Mayor W. R. L. Taylor, who made the memorial address at Elmwood Cemetery, deplored the fact that some college students have sworn they will never take part in a war in which the safety of the Nation may be at stake.

Former Governor's Son Seeks High Post

Cambridge, Md., May 30 (Spl.). Emerson C. Harrington, jr., son of former Gov. Harrington, today announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for associate judge of the First Judicial Circuit of Maryland.

Mr. Harrington, city attorney of Cambridge, is a past commander of the local American Legion Post and prominent in civic affairs. T. Bangston Insley, of this county, also has filed for nomination.

Farm Leader Hits New Deal Recovery Plan

Milo Reno Declares Laws Adequate to Correct Conditions.

Baltimore, May 30 (AP).—The Constitution of the United States was described today by Milo Reno, president of the Farmers Holiday Association, as being entirely adequate "to correct the present situation."

In a Memorial Day address before a meeting sponsored by the Maryland Farmers Union, he attacked the "New Deal" and gave an outline of what he believed could be accomplished "under the Constitution."

He said:

"Under the Constitutional authority and responsibility to promote the general welfare, we can fix a minimum wage; we can establish the hours that constitute a day's work; we can publicly own and operate the public utilities and perform all public services by public servants; we can coin money and regulate its value without the intervention of banks and private institutions; we can even have the authority to establish the value of a dollar as measured in labor or the products of labor instead of gold.

"We can prevent the monopolization of our natural resources that, in fact, belong to all. We can determine the just return on capital, whether owned by the Government or individuals. In fact, the Constitution of the United States is broad and comprehensive enough, if properly interpreted and administered, to meet every obligation of man to his fellows and of Government to her citizens.

"The people of this country are entitled to and will have a government as progressive as they are progressive."

He said that neither major political party had kept "one single pledge" to the farmer or made "an earnest, sincere attempt to do so."

Referring to the agricultural administration corn and hog program, he described it as "unthinkable from every angle, economically unsound, inhuman and destructive as to the future."

"The program of the present Administration's brain trust is to bring production down to present consumption, which would mean to perpetuate the hungry millions. The program of the real people of the United States is to bring consumption up to that point where it will balance production."

Memorial Held In Cumberland

Cumberland, Md., May 30 (Spl.). Many organizations joined in Memorial Day exercises at Rose Hill Cemetery today following a parade from the State armory. Fort Cumberland Post, No. 13, American Legion; Henry Hary Post, No. 1411, Veterans of Foreign Wars; Howard Hartsock Camp, Spanish-American War Veterans, and Tyler Post, Grand Army of the Republic, joined in the exercises.

Four surviving members of Tyler Post took part. The Eagles Toonerville Band and the drum corps of the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the First Infantry, Maryland National Guard, furnished martial music. The auxiliaries to the Legion and the V. F. W. were in the parade.

Julius E. Schindler delivered the address at the cemetery. The invocation and benediction were given by the Rev. William A. Eisenberger.

King College Graduates Addressed by Frierson

Bristol, Va., May 30 (Spl.).—W. L. Frierson, Assistant Attorney General of the United States under Wilson, addressed the graduating class of King College at commencement exercises in the college chapel last night.

Other activities were a meeting of the board of trustees and the annual dinner banquet.

Seniors at Ocean City Get Diplomas Tonight

Ocean City, Md., May 30 (Spl.). Seniors in the Ocean City High School will receive diplomas from Franklyn Purnell in commencement exercises here tomorrow at 8 p. m.

The program will include invocation by the Rev. D. Littleton, an address by the Rev. J. R. Bicking, presentation of special awards by William L. Bennett, principal, and benediction by the Rev. R. Billingsley. Music will be furnished by the high school chorus.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

A BARBER'S LETTER TO THE PRESIDENT.

Dear Mr. President:

Well, I see by the papers you have lifted the code on barber shops and I am writing to say that it is okay with me, although I don't see why a barber ain't got as much right to have a code and ignore it as anybody else.

* * * *

Of course, in the matter of trying to get the barbers of America to agree on a price for hair cuts and shaves Uncle Sam was licked from the start. A shave may be 20 cents by code agreement, but that gives the customers no protection, because all a barber has to do is to sprinkle a few different types of strong-smelling liniments on a face and it becomes a massage or skin treatment. And that goes for hair cuts. No matter how cheap you make a hair cut the wrong answer to "What will you have on your hair, sir?" will set the customer back anything from another dime to half a dollar, as it then comes under the head of a scalp treatment.

* * * *

And it was silly to try to fix a uniform rate for hair cuts and shaves, as one barber may be able to throw in twice as many racing and stock market tips as another. It is not fair to ask a dumb barber with no information on anything to get as much for a shave as a barber who is well versed on sporting affairs and current events gets.

* * * *

Take me personally: I am so well informed that I can argue with a customer on international as well as local topics and only the other day I met a severe test when a fellow who wanted a hair cut put me to quite a test by asking about the Chaco war.

* * * *

Well, naturally I charged him 60 cents. For another nickel I would have explained the true situation in the Polish Corridor and for 75 cents I would have thrown in a talk on the dangerous situation in the Far East and also cut the hairs from his nostrils.

* * * *

So you can see why a barber shop code was bound to be a flop. Still, I understand I am to be allowed to keep my Blue Eagle, for which I am grateful, as so many customers look at it and ask what it is, and that opens another line of conversation.

Yours truly,
Joe the Barber.

Parent Grange Plans Meeting

Quarterly Session Will Be Held on Saturday at Lewistown.

Frederick, Md., May 30 (Spl.).—Pomona Grange, parent body of six subordinate granges in Frederick County and three in Washington County, will hold its quarterly meeting at Community Hall, Lewistown, Saturday.

Busines will be transacted at the morning session and an entertainment program will be given in the afternoon under the direction of Edward F. Holter.

David Fry, master of Jefferson, will preside at the morning session, when reports and resolutions will be considered, a place selected for the annual State convention, and proposed legislation discussed and committees appointed. Plans for the annual Grange-Farm Bureau picnic will be considered.

Following lunch, Eugene L. Pruitt, school superintendent, will be the principal speaker.

The Frederick County granges are Middletown, Ballenger, Mount Pleasant, Jefferson, New Market, Lewistown, Braddock and Myersville. Leistersburg, Smithsburg and Indian Springs granges are in Washington County. The Frederick bodies have a membership of more than 900.

31 Get Diplomas At Mary Baldwin

Staunton, Va., May 30 (AP).—Graduation exercises were held yesterday in the chapel at Mary Baldwin College here and 31 young women received their diplomas.

Dr. David Allen Robertson, president of Goucher College, Baltimore, addressed the graduates on "Commencements."

On the program with Dr. Robertson were Dr. Hunter B. Blakley, president of the board of Mary Baldwin, and Dr. L. W. Jarman, president.

Mrs. Thomas H. Grafton introduced the chief speaker. The ceremonies were the ninety-second in the history of the college.

Necessarily kept from being overactive or overprominent in a House dominated by Democrats, this neat, small, but heavy-set legislator from the real estate paradise of Atlantic City nevertheless makes his influence felt. As a Republican spearhead he has fought the elimination of tax-exempt securities and is a ranking minority member of the purse-restraining Ways and Means Committee. When not attending sessions he is in the real estate and lumber business. A member of the New Jersey House of Representatives in 1911, he has won election to the Sixty-fourth and all succeeding Congresses. Born in Philadelphia 64 years ago. Overproduction Should End Worship of Property

By Robert Quillen

Those who would make intelligent plans for our future must recognize the fact that our civilization has lost its ancient foundation.

Since the beginning of history, men have labored and struggled and fought for bread. There was never enough for all. The race lived under threat of famine and none but the fortunate few had abundance of anything.

The fact of scarcity thus became the foundation of all institutions and customs and standards, and the inspiration for nine-tenths of our laws.

Thrift was a virtue because saving was necessary. The loafer was despised because his labor was needed.

Since there wasn't enough for all, one man's gain was another's loss. Skin or be skinned was the rule. The strongest or shrewdest won and made laws to protect their winnings, and the losers were offered the consolation of religion. It was a virtue to have property, but equally a virtue to be content without.

The coming of machinery changed everything.

Throw a little fodder to many hungry cattle and they will fight for it. Turn the same cattle into a field of knee-high clover and each will graze peacefully where it stands.

When the Cherokee Strip was opened in Oklahoma, thousands of men raced and fought for a share of it; when the whole vast West was open for settlement, no man coveted the claim of another for there was more than enough for all.

The change from scarcity to abundance requires a change of everything else.

Our property laws, moral standards, ethics, social distinctions and attitude of mind were the logical and necessary products of scarcity.

But now that men have learned to produce more than they can consume, it is no longer reasonable to envy, to covet, to worship property, to steal, to hoard.

Our future civilization must be built on the fact of abundance. Our age-old attitude toward property, first prompted by the fear of want, can not survive the fact of plenty.

Men don't quarrel over water rights in a land of abundant rainfall.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

An Octogenarian Poet.

The Hon. Robert Underwood Johnson is 81 years old. He has just published a new volume of original poems, most of which have been written during the last two years. This attractive little book starts off with a poem to President Roosevelt, whom it calls The Conqueror of Delay. They are various other epistolary poems, addressed to men prominent in public life and to men of letters. There are poems of reminiscence, and gayer verse in lighter and humorous moods. It is fine to see a man past 80 with no loss of the creative fire and no loss of ambition, for a man is not old in spirit so long as he continues to look forward.

Some of the poems I like best are those dealing with humble themes; for example, this one:

Mullein.

Its leaves are more like velvet
Than any baby's cheek,
Their green is of a color
That painters roam to seek.

A plummet is not straighter;
Robust its finial stands,
As tall as summer urchin
As gnarled as are his hands.

Its small frail yellow flower
Allures the yellow bee,
And with the yellow birds a-tit
Makes fluttering harmony.

Dr. Johnson has lived an active life outside of his library. He is one of the most distinguished graduates of Earlham College, Richmond, Ind. He joined the editorial staff of the Century Magazine in 1873, and was connected with it during the glorious years when its regular contributors were Mark Twain, W. D. Howells, Henry James, and others; in 1909 he became editor-in-chief.

He has been associated with innumerable good causes—international peace, international copyright, and has been of director of the Hall of Fame since 1918. He is one of the founders of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, and with John Muir set on foot the movement to create Yosemite National Park.

In 1920 he was appointed American Ambassador to Italy. He has received a large number of foreign decorations, medals and other honors; and the list of books he has written is impressive. In the Athenian sense, he is both a poet and a great citizen.

Foot-Notes and Gossip

STEPHEN VINCENT BENET, now that "James Shore's Daughter" is safely among the best-sellers (third at Brentano's last week), has taken to growing daffodils and crocuses in his New York backyard. He has no ambition to become a gentleman farmer. But he maintains a scientific interest in soils, especially that of his own bailiwick. This, it seems, "is chiefly broken electric light bulbs, bits of tin and iron, and a faint odor of consolidated gas." * * * If you want to have a hand in the coming eleventh edition of "Bartlett's Familiar Quotations" write to Little-Brown, 34 Beacon street, Boston, and suggest any quotation you'd like to have included. But you'll have to do some searching, for there's very little this famous work hasn't already bagged. * * * Baroness Blixen, who wrote "Seven Gothic Tales" (Smith & Haas) under the name of Isaak Dinesen, is coming to this country in June for her first visit. * * * The English firm of Cassell is bringing out Katherine Mayo's "Soldiers, What Next?" with this blurb—"the story of a scandal, not in India, but in the West." * * * Sales figures at the Viking Press for the first quarter of this year are 140 per cent over the same period in 1933, and even 24 per cent over that in 1929. They're gloating, but it must be fun.

When Capt. Goering, Premier of Prussia, banned B. Traven's "The Death Ship: the Story of an American Sailor" (Knopf), he locked the barn door after the horse was stolen. For the book had been a best-seller in Germany of over eight years, had sold over 300,000 copies there, and had run serially in more than 150 newspapers.

But not until the first English reviews of the book had reached Naziland did the Hitler regime do anything about it. The ban might almost be laid at the door of H. M. Tomlinson, who wrote in the London Daily Herald: "It can not be doubted that public health committees, and the gendarmerie, and all what-nots in office and uniforms, those hands and eyes of the God-State, would like to do to this story what the Nazis did to any work in which they could find a sign of life." Tomlinson was speaking, of course, of English bureaucrats, but Goering seized the hint.

Yet Goering can act as censor only in Prussia. Dr. Joseph Goebbels operates in the rest of Germany, and so far he has not banned the book.

Beverley Nichols is writing a sequel to "The Thatched Roof" and "Down the Garden Path" entitled "Village," all about swapping flowers with the neighbors. * * * Dr. Destouches (Louis-Ferdinand Celine) continues his medical work among the poor in a Paris clinic just as if he'd never written the best-selling "Journey to the End of the Night." The thousands of dollars of royalties pile up untouched in a bank. * * * Jane Culver, author of that excellent first novel, "So Stood I," has puzzled her publishers, Houghton-Mifflin, considerably. Miss Culver lives in New York, and admits to being a Westerner. But a bookseller in Eau Claire, Wis., has written for autographed copies, saying she is a local product. Claiming that she lives in Akron, Ohio, a paper there has wired for a picture. The Indianapolis Star gave a lead review to the book, exclaiming "Local Girl Makes Good." And Florida booksellers are pushing the novel on the strength of Miss Culver's associations with the South. The publishers dryly remark that this almost beats Homer.

Marcel Proust, or rather his literary legacy, has been taken over in toto by Random House from A. & C. Boni. The seven novels will continue at $2.50 each for a while, but in the fall a four-volume complete set for $10 is likely to appear. * * * James T. Farrell, author of "Young Lonigan" and "The Young Manhood of Studs Lonigan," is working on "Judgment Day," the third of the trilogy, at a place called Yaddo—wherever that may be. * * * Thorne Smith, "nursing an abscessed tooth and acquiring the color of a burnt crow" at a Florida beach, is mailing his new novel off to Doubleday-Doran in batches of five chapters each. It's called "The Glorious Pool," and tells of a Mr. Rex Pebble. What he does is still any man's guess. * * * The works of Clara Longworth, Countess de Chambrun, either start in French or end there. "Two Loves I Have" goes into a French edition in the fall. * * * Thames Williamson, with wife, 2-year-old boy, and a supply of canned vegetables for the latter, is visiting the Algerian village of Sidi Khaji Naji at the invitation of the local sheik. "North After Seas," Williamson's new story for boys, will appear this autumn from the presses of Houghton-Mifflin.

Gelett Burgess has insured, believe it or not, a chicken's wishbone. A friend sent it to him at the time his grand mystery yarn, "Two O'Clock Courage," was published by Bobbs-Merrill. So well is the book doing that Burgess laid it all to the wish-bone. At least, even in Paris where he lives, he got a sober French insurance company to write him a $1,000 policy. Every month now, the company sends around an inspector to see that the wish-bone is firmly tacked up on the wall of Burgess' studio.

G. O. P. Chiefs Rally Forces For New Fight

Call for Swing to "Right" as National Committee Meeting Looms.

By Raymond Clapper.

Republican war whoops summoning the faithful to battle went up in loud volume over Memorial Day, in preparation for the meeting of the Republican National committee at Chicago Tuesday, where a new chairman is to be chosen.

A common note ran through the cries. The Democratic Administration was assailed as too socialistic. Curtailment of Executive authority was demanded. Restoration of a more assertive Congress was sought. All spokesmen called for a swing to the right—but not too far back to reaction. There was a suggestion of mild liberalism here and there.

This, it would seem from these and previous utterances, appears to be the basis for the campaign to revive the Republican party.

G. O. P. Did It Before.

It is pitched with the thought in mind that the country is due soon for a reaction away from the intense centralization of Executive authority during the economic crisis. Republicans rode back to 12 years of power on the same strategy at the end of the Wilson wartime Administration. Many Republicans see a deep parallel now—first a wave of high enthusiasm approaching hysteria, in which criticism was submerged; a strong concentration of power in the hands of the Executive to enable him to meet rapidly changing conditions during a crisis, then a resurgence of critical opposition and finally a recation away from Executive domination.

No developments were reported over the holiday in the selection of the National chairman. Numerous candidates have been mentioned, but thus far none appears to have the needed majority support.

Those heard from in postholiday statements included Senator L. J. Dickinson, of Iowa, keynoter of the last Republican National convention; Mrs. Paul Fitz Simmons, Republican National committeewoman for Rhode Island, who being a Vanderbilt and smart to boot, pulls a heavy oar among Republican women leaders; Theodore Roosevelt, recently mentioned as a possible National chairman for the party, and former Senator Walter E. Edge, of New Jersey, still in the running for the chairmanship despite his marriage into a Standard Oil family.

Johnson Speaks Out.

None of these persons is necessarily a dominating force in the Republican party councils, but each has his sphere of influence. Furthermore, all of them are in close contact with one or more of the inside leaders who came near to directing party affairs. They all more or less reflect what the insiders who work in the background are thinking.

That the feeling against overcentralization of executive power has deep roots was indicated yesterday in Senate debate over the Administration reciprocal tariff bill when Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, spoke up. Though a Republican, he is now for Roosevelt and will have the Administration backing in his campaign for reelection. He told the Senate he was opposed to giving to any President the broad tariff powers proposed in the pending bill.

Theodore Roosevelt, in opening a drive to gather young members into the National Republican Club, of which he is president, said his organization would cling to no policy simply because it was the accepted doctrine of the party of old, and that recognizing that times change, it would look to the future. He said that policies would not be opposed simply because they were the policies of the opposition.

"Back to Constitution."

"We are convinced," Col. Roosevelt continued, "that the salvation of our country can best be obtained by orderly procedure under the spirit of the Constitution and the bill of rights.

"We hold that true liberalism is embodied in these documents and that free speech, free press and the right of peaceful assemblage are the lifeblood of democracy and freedom.

"We oppose the formulation and execution of National policies by persons who are not elected by the people or responsible to them.

"We feel that progress comes from individual initiative and industry, which must not be stifled. The ideal society is one that is fluid and in which each individual will rise or fall to the level of his industry and intelligence merit. We are unalterably opposed to regimentation or anything that predicates a society frozen in classes.

"We believe, however, that these days have brought to our land a keener sense of the humanities and a deeper need for social and industrial justice.

For Old-Age Pensions.

"We hold that stricter measures must be taken to prevent the exploitation of the many for the few, and that such policies as unemployment insurance, old-age pensions, &c., should receive immediate and serious consideration.

"We believe there can be no substantial or permanent business revival unless our currency is established on a sound metallic basis, the Federal Government's budget balanced and excessive governmental borrowing and mounting taxes checked."

He said that under a standard "of idealism and common sense" the country would advance to new heights.

Senator Dickinson, writing in the Awakener, declared that at the Republican National committee meeting the party should "select a Paul Revere to ride among our people and sound the warning that the remedy is in the hands of the voters themselves; that it is not too late to check the tide; that the delegated authority can be withdrawn; that the socialistic programs can be abandoned."

The new party chairman, he said, should be a disciple of constitutional government, an evangelist for sound government, alert and fearless.

"U. S. Becoming Sovietized."

Committeewoman Fitz Simmons, also writing in the Awakener, asked: "Are we going to sit by and watch our country being sovietized under the iron heel of Communistic Kommissars? Is our National credit to be destroyed, personal initiative to be strangled, the hard-earned savings of the old as well as the young rendered valueless, and the freedom and liberties of our land eliminated, without a word of protest? Is there to be no determined action by the citizens against the experimentation of a group of fanatical professors, drunk with power and determined to force upon the Nation their wild and impractical theories, many of them tried at various periods of the world's history and proven disastrous?"

Former Senator Edge, in his New Jersey State convention keynote speech, as reported here yesterday, declared that the party must recognize the liberal spirit of the times, but that this does not necessitate "the Roosevelt-Darrow-Brain Trust socialism which would plan the daily activities of the American people."

"I hope," he continued, "to see the Republican party take the sane middle ground which will recognize that labor and industry must be real partners in future development; that business enterprise will be regulated, yes, rigidly regulated, but that individual initiative properly recognizing the rights of all classes of society will be encouraged rather than deterred."

On the whole, Rejpublican leaders who are sounding the unofficial keynote for the party revival are showing little disposition to attempt to bid against the Administration for left wing independents. Apparently they figure that followers of Senator Norris, Secretary Ickes and Secretary Wallace have followed their leaders into the Democratic party and that not much can be done to win them back. There appears to be rather a play for the normal Republicans, who in ordinary years are in the majority in the United States, and play also for business men who may have been reduced by NRA—though it is significant that there is as yet no general wholesale attack on NRA directly. Republican talk is directed at regimentation, Government interference in business and in other general phrases, intended to hit at NRA, but without bringing the direct challenge too much in the open at this stage. It is probable, however, that after the way has been prepared the "crack-down" utterances of Gen. Johnson and his chief counsel, Donald Richberg, will be used widely.

AUBURN with DUAL-RATIO Again Proves Its Stuff at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway

"You bet AUBURN can really take it"

So says Wilbur Shaw, noted race driver

Down the Straightaway at 101 miles an hour

Coming out of the North Turn at 88 miles an hour

Hitting the famous South Turn at 93 miles an hour

Speeding around the Indianapolis Motor Speedway with Wilbur Shaw at the wheel, AUBURN again shows the world its dependability, its great riding comfort and its terrific power and speed. In this gruelling run AUBURN took the dangerous South Turn at ninety-three miles an hour . . . rounded the famous North Turn at eighty-eight miles an hour and reached the speed of one hundred and one miles an hour on the Straightaway.

Regardless of the roughness of this famous race course, at no time was the car out of perfect control and at all times it gave the delightful riding comfort you would expect on a perfectly smooth highway going at much less speed.

To prove these remarkable qualities of the AUBURN—drive it. You will be amazed at its road action, the steadiness of the steering wheel and the car's smooth, buoyant, gliding motion. On a curve, due to the ride stabilizer, the car does not sway or roll.

Additional priceless comfort comes from the hydraulic brakes with their smooth, responsive, velvety action that give you equalized pressure on all four wheels.

Also, in addition to the standard gear, comparable to that found in other cars, AUBURN gives you an Extra High gear that reduces engine revolutions, vibrations and noise . . . saves wear and tear on moving parts and saves fuel. And does this without sacrificing the speed. Drive an AUBURN yourself. You will find that you can do the same thing that Wilbur Shaw did on the Speedway track, with safety and comfort.

Fish's Praise Cheers Allies Of Sen. Byrd

Democrats Claim G. O. P. in Virginia Injured by Commendation.

Richmond, May 30 (Spl.).—The praise which Representative Hamilton Fish, of N. Y., Republican, gave Senator Harry F. Byrd for the junior Senator's opposition to the new farm bill will gravely embarrass any G. O. P. plans to fight Senator Byrd in the general election this year, Virginia Democratic leaders declared today.

Representative Fish's praise of Senator Byrd not only should find an echo among independent voters and Republicans but will handicap any efforts to raise an anti-Byrd war chest outside the State, the Democrats believe.

The Democratic leaders are under no illusions as to the popularity of the Roosevelt-Wallace farm program, realizing that many Virginia farmers disagree with Senator Byrd. But they reported today that many Roosevelt-Wallace Democrats will continue to support Senator Byrd because he has the courage to battle for his convictions.

Reports thus far indicate that Senator Byrd's vigorous opposition to provisions of the new farm bill found a favorable response in many parts of the State, despite the popularity of most of the Roosevelt policies.

Senator Byrd, who is up for reelection for a full term this autumn, has no primary opposition. He was opposed last year when he ran for the unexpired portion of Secretary Swanson's term, by Henry A. Wise, of Accomac.

It has been assumed that if the G. O. P. enters a candidate, it will be a fresh opponent who will need a big volume of support in order to make any headway against the former Governor. He is strongest in the heavy-voting Valley and southwest, and even the most optimistic Republicans believe no eastern Virginia Republican has any chance against him.

More Americans Going to Europe

Auto Association Reports Tourist Increase.

Europe's highways will be dotted by an increased number of American automobiles, driven by vacationing Americans, during the summer and autumn, the American Automobile Association said yesterday.

The step-up in travel abroad is in a way a reflection of the motor-travel interest at home, the association pointed out. The increase at home will be about 20 per cent, while the increase of motor tourists from the United States abroad will be 10 to 15 per cent, the association asserted.

Passports issued through April were 12 per cent ahead of last year, with applications still pouring in, while the association's foreign travel division has handled 30 per cent more cars for foreign ports this year than for a similar period last year.

Boy Scouts Will Go To Camp Saturday

700 Expected on Trip to Chesapeake Bay.

The annual spring excursion of Washington Boy Scouts to their camp on Chesapeake Bay will be held Saturday, with about 700 youngsters, accompanied by Scout leaders and parents, expected to attend.

The Scouts will leave from the District Line station of the Chesapeake Beach Railway by special train and hike the four miles to the camp from Seaside Park. A program of games and sports will fill the day.

Camp Roosevelt will open for the summer on June 25 and Scout executives expect an unusually busy season. The spring trip is designed to acquaint the boys with the advantages of a camp vacation. Edward C. Hartung will be in charge.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker.
(Trade-mark Applied For)

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

TODAY in reverence we bow
To those departed souls who now
Each in his narrow envelope
Sleeps peacefully upon the slope
Of Arlington's green, shaded lawn.

Theirs was to fight, to carry high
The flag to victory; to die,
If need be, lest this Nation fall
And to that end some who gave all
Now here await that distant dawn.

Amid salute and martial play
We'll pause in reverence to lay
A flower upon each gentle mound,
Remembering we, too, are bound
Shortly to join those who have gone.

And as we pass along this way,
May we resolve anew today
Each as a Federal employe
That he will individually
Keep that high trust and pass it on.

OBSERVING completion yesterday of 50 years of public service by the Bureau of Animal Industry, Agriculture, Dr. John R. Mohler (*), the present and third chief of the bureau, received congratulations from employes.

Representatives of various divisions of the bureau discussed salient events of the past in Dr. Mohler's office. The bureau's participation in drought relief was discussed at length, especially as it related to live stock.

Bureau officials participating in the conference were Dr. Mohler, Dr. A. W. Miller, Dr. Marion Dorset, Dr. M. C. Hall, Dr. R. P. Steddom, Dr. G. W. Pope, Dr. D. I. Skidmore, Dr. W. M. MacKellar, Dr. A. E. Wight, Dr. W. S. Gochenour, Dr. T. P. White, D. A. Spencer and D. S. Burch.

Dr. Edson Transferred.

Transfer of Dr. Howard A. Edson from Civil Service Commission to Bureau of Plant Industry, Agriculture, was announced yesterday by the commission. Dr. Edson will be in charge of plant disease survey for the bureau. He was employed in scientific work of the Department of Agriculture before going to Civil Service Commission on March 27, 1927.

Names of 59 persons were removed from the Civil Service reemployment register last week, and names of 15 were added, the commission announced last night. Included in the 1,931 remaining on the reemployment list are 199 who are employed temporarily.

Woman Gang Suspect Held

Wife of Escaped Convict Brought Here From Philadelphia.

A young woman, wife of an escaped Lorton convict, arrested in Philadelphia less than 48 hours after a general police alarm for apprehension of a tri-State gangster band, was held under heavy guard at the House of Detention last night.

The woman, Mrs. Barbara Kendrick, 28, wife of John Kendrick, escaped prisoner and son of a former Washington policeman, was returned here early yesterday by Postal authorities and Detective Sergt. Floyd Truscott.

Her arrest followed distribution of a Postoffice Department "lookout" circular naming seven members of an alleged bandit gang. A Philadelphia policeman recognized Mrs. Kendrick from a photograph on the circular.

Although Mrs. Kendrick was questioned for nearly ten hours, Philadelphia police reported she "refused to admit anything, not even her name." Local authorities said she would be grilled regarding numerous Washington crimes, including a mail robbery and shooting at Union Station last December.

Mrs. Kendrick and her husband were named with five others as members of a bandit gang operating in Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania and Washington. Police are seeking Kendrick, Herbert Myers, 39; Robert Mais, 28; Mary McKeever, 34; William Davis, 40, escaped convict, and Arthur Misanas, 37.

Novena to Sacred Heart Continues Until June 8

A Novena to the Sacred Heart will be given at the Church of Nativity starting today, and ending with the Feast of the Sacred Heart June 8.

The Rev. Lawrence A. McGlone, director of the League of the Sacred Heart, under whose auspices the Novena is being given, has announced the schedule of events, which includes special prayers each day at 7 a. m. and 8:15 a. m. masses, and evening devotions at 8 o'clock, with Novena prayers and a sermon by the Rev Thomas Anderson, S. M., followed by benediction and the Blessed Sacrament.

Beg Pardon.

The name of Randall Jones, captain of Company F, Western, which was selected as the best rookie company in the competitive drill, appeared in The Post yesterday as J. F. Randall.

The name was given as Randall in The Adjutant, official publication of the cadet corps, and the information was obtained from this source.

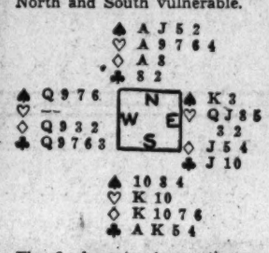
Card Reading.

A good Bridge player needs to be an excellent reader of the cards. It is often essential to secure an exact, or nearly exact, count of opponents' hands so that an end-play or squeeze may be executed.

In today's hand the Declarer read the cards well and secured a correct count of the opposing hands, and, aided by a slip in the defense, was able to make a very clever one-play.

North, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.



The final contract was three notrump after North had opened with a heart and South had responded with two notrumps, without disclosing his four-card club suit.

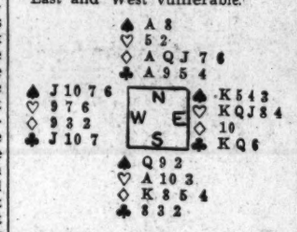
West's Opening lead was the club 3, an unconventional Opening from his five-card suit. West actually made this unconventional opening lead because his hand contained no sure re-entry. East was permitted to hold the first trick with the Ten, but when the Knave was returned, South won with the Ace. Figuring, on the basis of the information disclosed, that West had only four clubs, South now decided to play the hand upon the basis of a normal break in the heart suit. He led the King from his own hand and West discarded a diamond. South now knew that West had not led his fourth-best club. Inasmuch as he had no hearts he must have had a five-card suit originally and this apparently was clubs. With this count on the West hand, South was compelled to change his plans.

He led the eight of spades, West covered with the nine, and Dummy's Knave was taken by East's King. Had East, at this point, returned another spade, South could not have fulfilled his contract. East however, not realizing the difficulties he was creating for his partner, led the Queen of hearts, West was again forced to discard, dropping a club, and the Ace in Dummy won the trick. The Declarer now laid down the Ace of diamonds in Dummy and returned Dummy's last diamond, playing the King from his own hand. He then led a small diamond, which West was forced to win with the Queen, and West returned a club, which South won with the King. South now cashed his established diamond and then returned another club, again forcing West into the lead, and West, who held only the Queen-seven of spades, was compelled to concede the remaining tricks.

Even after his partner's failure to return a spade to the fifth trick, West could have defeated the contract by playing the Queen of diamonds under South's King. This would have permitted East to gain the lead on the third round of diamonds with his Knave, and West would not then have been caught in the end-play.

Tomorrow's Hand.

North, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.



The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Crossing Crash Increase Is Hit

AAA Says Carelessness Is to Blame, Calls for Caution.

A wave of recklessness is sweeping the Nation's highways, and during the first two months of the present year grade-crossing accidents increased 34 per cent over the same period of last year, the American Automobile Association asserted yesterday in an appeal for greater care among persons vacationing in their automobiles.

In January and February there were 718 automobile accidents at grade crossings, while during the same months in 1933 the number was but 534, the association pointed out. The resuts of these smashups were 240 fatalities and 875 injuries. The injury list being 44 per cent over the corresponding period of last year.

Thomas P. Henry, Detroit, president of the association, said yesterday, "by far the greater number of these accidents are caused by carelessness."

First Lady Makes Visit to Old White

Historical Presidents' Cottage Has Been Reopened.

Springs Attract Interest as Polo Center of Mid-South.

It was quite appropriate that Mrs. Roosevelt should pay a visit to White Sulphur Springs this week during the reopening to the public of the historical Presidents' Cottage, a museum restored two years ago in memory of past Presidents of the United States who lived there when the Old White was virtually the summer White House.

Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, who paid a brief visit to the Springs before continuing on to New York to review the fleet yesterday, expressed keen interest in the museum and its collection of relics. Hundreds of persons visited the double-pillared structure this week and tea was served in the varandas in the afternoon.

To the collection this week was added a group of photographs and engravings made at the Old White more than a century ago—depicting some of the gayeties of those days, such as the champagne parties on the lawn. Mrs. Ashton Reniers, of New York and Richmond, recently secured some rare old frames, after combing the countryside, for the photographs.

The opening of the Old White Art Colony, under the codirection of Mrs. Natalie Eynon Grauer and William C. Grauer, Cleveland artists, was another feature of the week.

Increased interest is being directed toward White Sulphur Springs as the polo center of the mid-South and with a movement on foot to establish a race track in this section horse activities have gained marked impetus. West Virginia has a race track at Wheeling, another at Charleston, and White Sulphur Springs is now under consideration for the third racing point.

Horse shows and race meets were popularized here in 1898 on the field, which is now the Greenbrier Airport and polo fields, and the east end of the Old White golf course was then a race track for running horses. Evidences of the track still remain—in fact, the water bucket at the third tee on the Old White course bears the name "race track."

A schedule of polo games is being prepared for the season and among teams which will compete against the Greenbrier Polo Club are the Washington County Polo Club, of Hagerstown, Md.; the Maryland Polo Club, of Baltimore; the Fort Myer Army Team, of Washington; the Fauquier-Loudoun Team, of Middleburg, Va.; the Carmargo Team, of Cincinnati, and the Iroquois Polo Club, of Lexington, Ky.

Navy Circles Receive News Of Betrothal

Miss Natalie Hess Will Become Bride of Lieut. Winslow.

An engagement of interest to Navy circles is that of Miss Natalie Hess, daughter of Mrs. Hamilton Hess, of Los Angeles, and Mr. Nathanial J. Hess, of New York, to Lieut. Cameron McRae Winslow, U. S. N., son of Mrs. Cameron Rae Winslow, of Newport, R. I., and New York, and the late Rear Admiral Winslow.

Miss Hess attended the Howe-Marot School in Thompson, Conn., and made her debut several seasons ago. She is a well-known horsewoman and has ridden to the hounds on Long Island and in Connecticut.

Lieut. Winslow was graduated from the Uited States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., in 1924, and is a member of the Army and Navy and Knickerbocker Clubs of New York. His father, who died in January, 1932, in Boston, was cited for heroism during the Spanish-American War and later was naval aid to President Theodore Roosevelt. At his detirement in 2916 he was in command of the Pacific Fleet and had served previously as commander of various divisions of the Atlantic Fleet.

Lieut. Winslow was awarded the Navy Cross for distinguished service in 1930 after repelling an attack by Chinese bandits on the Yangtse River. Through his mother, the former Miss Theodora Havemeyer, Lieut. Winslow is a grandson of the late Theodore Havemeyer. His sisters are Mrs. Auguste L. Nole, Mrs. Cecil I. Wylde and Miss Natalie Winslow, and his brothers are Mr. John Chilton Winslow and Mr. Arthur Winslow 2d.

Lieut. Winslow is at present attached to the U. S. S. Arkansas, which will make the midshipmen's cruise to Europe next month, returning to this country the end of August.

The wedding will take place in the early autumn.

Miss Davenport Weds Mr. Rhem

Married Last Monday in North Carolina.

The wedding of Miss Dora Mae Davenport to Mr. John Woodrow Rhem, both of Lenoir County, was solemnized Monday afternoon at the Baptist parsonage in Kinston, N. C., Dr. T. C. Johnson officiating. The ceremony was witnessed by close relatives and friends of the young couple.

The bride was attired in a traveling suit of brown and yellow with accessories to match. She is the oldest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Bryant J. Davenport, and the granddaughter of Phennias Davenport, pioneer settler of the Woodington section of Lenoir County. For several years she made her home in Washington with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Gilford Davenport. For the past three years she has made her home with Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Stroud, of Kinston. She was educated in the Kinston and Washington schools.

Mr. Rhem is the son of Mrs. Lena Rhem and the late Mr. Frank Rhem, of Grainger Station. He is a graduate of the Contentnea High School of Lenoir County.

Mr. and Mrs. Rhem left for a short wedding trip, after which they will be at home at Grainger Station.

Washington Girl Will Be Bride Of Lieut. Jones

Miss Virginia E. Stokes to Be Married Here on June 7.

Another early June wedding is that of Miss Virginia Elizabeth Stokes, daughter of Col. Marcus Butler Stokes, U. S. A., retired, and Mrs. Stokes, and Lieut. Homer W. Jones, U. S. A., son of Mrs. Jones and the late Mr. Gomer Jones, of Taylor, Pa., which will take place June 7.

The ceremony will be performed at 4 o'clock at All Soul's Memorial Church by the Rev. Albert Joseph McCartney, pastor of the Church of the Covenant.

Miss Stokes has selected her sister-in-law, Mrs. Marcus Butler Stokes, jr., of Fort Bragg, N. C., for her matron of honor, and her cousin, Miss Elizabeth Lewis, of Chester, S. C., will be the maid of honor. Little Miss Marcia Hall Stokes, the bride-elect's niece, will be the flower girl.

Lieut. Jones has selected Capt. Wilson Persons for his best man and the ushers will be Maj. Frank F. Scowden, Maj. Herbert J. Lawes, Lieut. Marcus Butler Stokes, jr., and Lieut. Hall Stokes, brothers of the bride-elect.

Following the ceremony there will be a small reception for the members of the two families and a few out-of-town guests and intimate friends at the home of the bride's parents on Cathedral avenue.

Alliance Delegates Will Make Reports

The last meeting this season of the Women's Alliance will be held tomorrow at 11 o'clock. Mrs. James M. Doran and Mrs. U. G. B. Pierce, delegates to the recent May meetings of the General Alliance which were held in Boston, will make their reports.

A cafeteria luncheon will be served at 1 o'clock by the linen committee. The proceeds of the luncheon will be used to purchase materials for this committee so that it can begin work for the winter bazaar. Mrs. F. W. Tilley is chairman and Mrs. R. Schneider, vice chairman.

Byzantine Art, Architecture, Society Topic

Delphian Group to Meet at Hamilton Hotel This Morning.

BYZANTINE art and architecture will be the subject of discussion at the meeting of the Columbia Chapter of the Delphian Society at 9:45 o'clock this morning at the Hamilton Hotel.

Mrs. Charles Le Hew will be the leader and will open the meeting with a talk on "The Origin and Character of Byzantine Art."

Other topics to be discussed are: "The Catacombs," by Mrs. R. F. Mancill; "Basilican Churches," by Mrs. Elizabeth Davidson; "Byzantine Churches," by Dr. A. M. Finnegan; "The Romanesque," by Mrs. M. E. Thatcher; "Gothic Churches," by Mrs. Clem C. Williams; "Church Decoration," by Mrs. J. G. Yaden, and "The Rise of the Universities," by Mrs. W. H. Downes.

Final Dance Tonight.

The social section of the Women's Club of Chevy Chase, Md., under the leadership of Mrs. Hugh E. Phillips, will hold its final dance of the season at 8:30 o'clock tonight at the Bethesda Women's clubhouse.

The hostesses will be Mrs. George A. Finch, Mrs. Arthur E. Nesbitt and Mrs. Harrison F. Fitts. Among those attending will be Mr. and Mrs. Bruce S. Branson, Mr. and Mrs. Harold E. Burton, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Crocker, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. DeVeau, Mr. and Mrs. Russell T. Edwards, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick F. Espenschied, and Maj. and Mrs. Barton P. Root.

* * * *

The nature section of the club will hold a picnic at 10 o'clock this morning in Erk's Woods, near Mount Vernon. Mrs. Edmund Erk is the leader of the group.

To Elect Officers.

The Women's Auxiliary of the National Association of Master Plumbers, organized 16 years ago for educational, benevolent and historical purposes, will continue its business sessions today at the Mayflower Hotel. The afternoon session will be devoted to the election of officers.

All of the delegates will assemble at 9:30 o'clock tonight at the Mayflower to take part in the closing festivity of the convention.

The Rev. Mary Schutt Dougherty will read poems from her new book, "The Thoughts to the Poetic Muse," at the meeting of the Psychic Literary Circle at 8 o'clock tonight at 48 H street northeast. Mrs. Edward James Irvine will be the guest of honor. Dr. Edwin J. Irvine, D.D., president, will preside.

"A Year of the New Deal" will be discussed by Mrs. Charles S. Hamlin, Miss M. Bakewell, Mrs. C. L. Hendrickson, Ellis Meredith and Mrs. Edward P. Costigan, at the annual luncheon of the education committee of the Woman's National Democratic Club, at 12:30 o'clock today, at 1526 New Hampshire avenue northwest. Mrs. Edward P. Costigan, chairman, will introduce the speakers.

Mrs. Otto Hammerlund, president of the Woman's Club of Petworth, will entertain the executive board this evening at her home, 4414 Illinois avenue northwest.

The duplicate contract section of the American Association of University Women, under the direction of Mrs. Warner J. O'Leary, will hold a meeting at 7:30 o'clock this evening at the club house.

The closing banquet of the Blue Triangle Club will be held at 6 o'clock this evening at Barker Hall, Seventeenth and K streets northwest.

The Children's Music Study Club, of 614 E street will meet at 4 o'clock today.

Flower Jewelry Shown In Fashion Openings

Paris, May 29.—Real flower bracelets, necklaces and rings worn with lace and tulle evening gowns paraded across the summer style stage here in the fashion showing presented by Ardanse.

The flowers, gay as a summer garden, sometimes used in their natural colors and sometimes dyed to harmonize with the color scheme of a frock, were treated by a process which the designer says is guaranteed to keep them fresh 12 hours.

Fragment flower necklaces occasionally were worn like an Hawaiian lei hanging down the back, again finished with a flat plaque of multicolored blooms. Rings were "set" with a single flower the size of a small rose standing like a high mounted stone. Bracelets finished with a flat plaque of flowers, and drop-earrings of little blossoms gave a "midsummer-night's-dream" aura to the frocks.

Linen Is Crashing Every Corner of the Country

HERE'S an object lesson in how to look cool and comfortable through weather so hot that asphalt runs in the streets. The dress is of linen, the favorite this summer, and is alleged not to crush.

Will Be Used for Sports, Afternoon and Evening Wear, Not to Mention Its Quiet General Adoption for Accessories.

LINEN has crashed the summer fashion field with more energy and thoroughness than in many seasons, being used for sports, spectating, afternoon and evening. An example of just how nicely it can be made up is shown on the pictured girl. This dress in cool blue-and-white polka dots is a pretty grand affair to wear all summer for any variety of activities; though it's informal. The tucked shirt front gives it a debonair air to carry it through hot mornings and on until the cocktail hour.

Put an eye onto the lady's hat, also. This little straw is just one of the manifestations of the early 1900's styles that are returning with such vigor and success. These stiff-brimmed sailors will appear on country club porches and lawns as well as coming to town with the more tailored prints.

Aside from being one of the staples of the season, linen is around on all sorts of accessories. One of the quaintest which is sending the fashion writers into raves is the fur and linen combination. This strange alliance is carried out on short fur capes, usually of silver fox or some other swank animal.

Resembles Lace.

The linen, which is stiffly starched and heavily embroidered, resembles lace more than the straight handkerchief variety. It forms a schoolgirlish small collar with long ends which are to be tied in a large bow completely obstructing any possible view of the wearer's chin. This doesn't sound very plausible, but must be seen to be appreciated. It is excellent for the cool nights that descend every once in a while during the summer, and is worn with cocktail clothes or the formal evening things.

Linen always has been worn by riders all through the summer and continues to be so this year. If any authentic horse lover craves to fool her public and resemble a movie star she can do it in a costume concocted by a New York shop consisting of white boots, black pants and vest of linen, a white polo shirt and a white linen hat.

Shorts are overrunning the country in every material from taffeta to seersucker, yet the linen ones are usually the most attractive. Incidentally, even if the wearer is one of those conservatives she can go practically anywhere in her shorts this summer and still feel au fait and all that. Although they're best for beach wear and tennis, they stride the fairways, shoot arrows at archery targets and swat ping-pong balls as well.

Hold Nationwide Appeal.

Probably no designer thought of it at the time, but this influx of nautical trends in slacks, shorts, overalls, dresses and what not makes it a bit hard for the millions of inland women who have to dress like sailors for their sports when the only body of water within 50 miles is the old swimming hole.

Dispatches from the territories where these many unfortunates live, however, say that's making no difference. Nautical styles go anywhere. The mountain vacationer can take hers along with as much confidence in the suitability of the things as the girl who's going to loaf her days away within the sound of the surf.

Speaking of beaches, to wander a bit farther from the original subject of linen, the tie silks that made such a hit back in the winter in dresses to wear under fur coats are appearing again, this time in the guise of bathing or play suits. The best of them come with pajamas or robe to match and are very swank indeed. They probably aren't silk, however. Something synthetic that takes to water with more aplomb.

Woman's Hand Rules Buying Of Men's Wear

D. C. Haberdashers Say Wife Wants Husband to Look Perfect.

WOMAN'S opinion dominates the purchase of about 50 per cent of masculine wearing apparel. Accompanying husband or sweetheart to the haberdasher or department store, a woman often realizes an ambition to make her man over in appearance. If he is too quiet in disposition, she seeks to inject life into his ties; if he is a step ahead of her, she strives to tone him down by insisting upon darker hues

These observations, and many more, come from approximately 20 men's furnishing salesmen interviewed on the subject yesterday.

John C. Russell, of Raleigh Haberdasher, feels that women have superior taste in selecting men's merchandise, and, therefore, should be encouraged to make the purchases.

"With women, shopping reduced to a science," he said. "They give more time and thought to color effects and combinations. They keep the shade of a husband's eyes and complexion in mind when choosing clothes for him. Men too often ignore these elements and are more haphazard in their selections. Women, thinking always in terms of ensembles, rather than individual pieces, are the more expert buyers, even in the field of men's merchandise."

Says Robert Meyer of the Meyer's Men's Shop:

"A woman usually sees in her husband a potential movie star. Imbued with the flawless, tailor-made technique of Alophe Menjou, Clark Gable or Robert Montgomery, whose suits had probably a dozen fittings and cost upwards of $150, she decides her husband must get new clothes. Accompanying him to the haberdasher, she tries to duplicate, for $35, her movie hero's appearance in her husband.

"A woman never seems to take her husband's age or physique into consideration. If, after exhausting herself and the salesman, her husband doesn't turn out to look just like the star she has in mind, it isn't the husband's fault. Oh, no—it's the haberdasher's."

Most Are Accompanied.

It's a miracle, declared a chorus of male voices at Bond's, if a man comes in to purchase a suit without some woman along. It's either his wife, his mother, his sister or his sweetheart, who passes final judgment on his purchases. Harry P. Grier, salesman of 33 years' standing, had more specific ideas to offer.

"Some men would wear frills to please their wives," he said. "Men abhor scenes, so let the women have their way. The salesman, alas, must forget seasonal color charts and masculine style trends and bow to the woman's judgment on what fits her husband best. If he doesn't, it is good-by sale.

Men are braver alone when it comes to choosing bright colors for their ties, according to Ray Connelly, of Saltz Brothers.

Affects Man's Judgment.

"Women's presence often has a sobering effect on a man's judgment," he said. "Women, unaccompanied, usually select extremely subdued shades for their men folks, for fear of overdoing it."

Yes, women even carry their views into the men's shoe stores, according to E. V. Potter, of the Regal Shoe Co. With a humorous twinkle, he recalled certain women, who insisted they knew more than their husbands about the sizes of shoes they should wear.

"Some women even defy the salesman and the measuring stick to carry their point," he said.

Women are responsible for men buying hats, averred Alfred Bennett, proprietor of the Bennett Hat Shop.

"Left to himself," Mr. Bennett said, "the man would go on wearing the same old hat indefinitely, regardless of his change in suits. While women are sometimes carried away by a pretty band and lose track of quality and workmanship, they are better judges of appearances in men's hats than the men themselves are.

"Men usualy buy their hats too small. They want the feeling of security that a too tight crown gives. This is not only bad for their scalps, but is not conducive to the best appearance. Women cooperate with the salesman in making their men take the proper fit. For that reason and many others, we call women the hat salesman's best friend."

Life in Washington Pleases Bimbo, the Monkey, Who Gets Plenty of Fancy Foods—and Worms

BIMBO, WHOSE OTHER NAME is "Weeping Capuchin," is a small Brazilian monkey once owned by the late motion picture actress, Alma Rubens. Now he belongs to Mr. and Mrs. Phillip A. Frear. He's shown on the latter's shoulder.

Owners Have Provided Cage With Big Silver Monogram

Son and Daughter-in-Law of Representative Frear Acquired Simian After Death of Alma Rubens, Motion Picture Beauty.

By Helen Fetter Cook.

IN a magnificent cage with his monogram in huge silver letters on it, a small Brazilian monkey has found rare haven in Washington after earlier tempestuous years. The cage occupies a sunny alcove in the beautiful Connecticut avenue apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Philip A. Frear, son and daughter-in-law of Representative James A. Frear, of Wisconsin.

Bimbo—a black-faced ring-tail monkey—whose technical name is "Weeping Capuchin," so-called because of the monk-like black cap above his quizzical, wrinkled little face, has seen much in his five years of living. He was first the pet of the motion picture beauty, Alma Rubens, and it was after her death when her roommate, who wasn't very fond of monkeys, had him in charge that Mr. Frear first saw him and was filled with the kindly urge to take the little simian home and care for him.

That was four years ago in New York. Now Bimbo virtually rules the Frear household, including Mary, a Maltese terrier who looks like a poodle.

Come to See Bimbo.

"People don't come to see us," said pretty young Mrs. Frear yesterday, "they come to see Bimbo. I understand that when Miss Rubens got Bimbo it was quite the thing for actresses to have for pets perfumed monkeys who were supposed to give out a delicate aroma. Personally, I have yet to meet one with a 'delicate aroma.' Unless you are very careful, the scent is quite the contrary.

Bimbo may have had a hard life as a movie star's pet, but he's apparently leading an aristocratic existence now. He eats when the family does and demands—and gets—tidbits from the table just as a spoiled child would. He also is like a child in having a special fondness for ice cream. That and huge red cherries are his favorite desserts—taken separately, of course. His very special friend is Representative Frear.

Recognizes Footsteps.

"Father Frear always brings Bimbo peanuts, or candy, or some other sweet," said Mrs. Frear, "and Bimbo knows his step and his voice immediately he enters the door. He raises an awful fuss until Father Frear comes in and pets him. He wants Father Frear to hold his paw all the time he is here."

Mary, the dog, is Bimbo's loyal companion. She will not hesitate to fight any dog, no matter how large or ferocious, in defense of Bimbo.

"But Bimbo himself is the match for any dog," said Mrs. Frear. "He is tremendously strong. It is all I can do to hold him when I take him out now and he wants to get away to play."

"I believe Bimbo was born in captivity," said Mrs. Frear, "for he doesn't seem to know what trees are for. When we put him up in a tree several different times he couldn't get down quickly enough."

Bimbo likes to travel, especially by motorcar. He has enjoyed vacations at Atlantic City and traveled over most of the United States.

First to Tour Canada.

"Bimbo was the first monkey tourist ever registered in Canada," said Mrs. Frear, "and he always has proved an excellent traveler."

When a trip such as the Frears' recent visit to Mexico doesn't make it feasible to take Bimbo and Mary, they leave them with Dr. Collins, Washington veterinarian.

"The first time we had to leave Bimbo behind in Washington," said Mrs. Frear, "we almost decided to put him in the zoo. Dr. Mann said we could leave him there and we thought Bimbo might enjoy being with other monkeys and maybe have a romance or so. But a chap who did some valeting for Mr. Frear protested when he learned of our plan.

"'Aw, don't leave Bimbo at the zoo, Mr. Frear,' he said. 'Those monkeys there ain't his class! And they don't get no dessert, either!'

Bimbo is due for more traveling soon, as the young Frears are planning to take both pets with them to New Mexico for the summer.

Young Women of Today Put Bloomers to Shame

Anniversary of Birth of Advocate of Turkish-Trouser Costume Arrives at Time When Brief Costumes Are Much in Favor.

THE modern bare-legged girl in shorts pedaling down the street on her bicycle, lounging in slacks on the beach, or plunging into the waves in a stamp-edition bathing suit, often causes mild consternation among her elders. But the girl who wore bloomers more than a century ago created a sensation.

The 116th anniversary of the birth of Amelia Jencks Bloomer—advocate of the Turkish-trouser costume for women—is being celebrated this week by feminists. Ironically enough, this commemoration of a woman who once was hooted for her attire comes at a time when members of her sex are going for, as never before, what may be termed generically "pants."

Although Mrs. Bloomer gained National prominence as a journalist, lecturer, and exponent of feminine free-thinkig, she is remembered chiefly for inaugurating the bloomer fad. She was not the first, however, to wear this "sanitary dress for women, fashioned of a short skirt and Turkish trousers," which she recommended in an editorial in The Lily, her periodical devoted to temperance and the interests of women. Miss Elizabeth Smith, another ardent feminist, was the original "bloomer girl."

Had Several Followers.

Soon after Miss Smith made her first appearance in the new costume, Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton, a leading woman suffragist, discarded her other clothes in favor of the new style. Eventually, Mrs. Bloomer herself followed the example. Later, when Susan B. Anthony, the Rev. Antoinette Brown and Mrs. Bloomer made a lecture tour through New York, all three appeared on the platform in the new type of attire.

Strongly individual as these three women were, however, they finally succumbed to public sentiment and left off either advocating or wearing the bloomer dress. For the next few years, sweeping skirts of many folds and ruffles were adopted by even the most ardent feminists until Dr. Mary Walker was graduated from medical school and began to practice in Columbus, Ohio.

Always a zealous advocate of dress reform for women, she adopted what she called the American reform costume—consisting of ankle-legnth bloomers and a short skirt. Later she began to wear full male attire.

A frequent visitor to Washington in interest of the suffrage movement, Dr. Walker, accompanied by Mrs. Jane Swisshelm, became a familiar figure on Capitol Hill. Dressed in an original model that omitted the skirt and consisted of full trousers beginning well above her high-buttoned shoes, Mrs. Swisshelm was accorded as much attention as Dr. Walker in her straight trousers, high hat and frock-tailed coat.

Deserve to Be Remembered.

Each woman who innovated a new type of costume in the 50's and 60's deserves to be remembered for many things. Among Dr. Walker's many accomplishments was the introduction of the postal card receipt for registered letters which was finally adopted by postal authorities.

A Cat Tale

A-hunting He Will Go; Under P Street Bridge.

WHEN a fluffy gray kitten strayed away from home yesterday, he went exploring beneath the P street bridge.

Workmen and a group of spectators watched him as he picked his way gingerly over the freshly turned soil, climbed embankments, and surveyed the world from rocky mounds.

* * * *

As he continued his stroll he walked more cautiously than ever, and appeared to be disgusted that all the long grass and weeds had been dug up from his hunting ground.

* * * *

Finally his pace gained momentum and he struck out like a thirsty nomad who suddenly sights an oasis. He made for a small clump of dandelions—the only growing things which seemed to have survived the ravages of building a new bridge.

* * * *

Evincing the pride of a Columbus who sails toward newfound shores, he circled the small plant and sniffed at its four blossoms.

* * * *

At length, gripping one of the stems between his teeth, he pulled with all his young animal strength. Once. Twice. Three times! And the flower was his.

* * * *

Still clutching it in his mouth he bore off in the direction from whence he came, and finally disappeared down a bridle path.

Woman's Touch Seen Excellent For Billiards

Game Was Started in 18th Century Tailor Shop in London.

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

BILLIARDS may have started among eighteenth century English dandies in a London tailoring shop, but today it is the women who are planning billiard rooms in their homes. And it is not only to please husbands and sons that the rooms are planned, but to gain practice for their own championship games.

Along about the 1750s, gallants of the period used to gather for their fittings at the shop of a tailor, known familiarily as Bill. They tossed about the balls of chalk that he used in marking garments, and finally one day a young man leaned across the cutting table and poked at a ball with a yardstick. This proved an amusing pastime, and so the game evolved. So it was named "Bill's yards," and the name finally was broken down to billiards.

Through the years that men have played billiards, women have watched, and sometimes tried for themselves. Now they are in earnest. Georgia Veatch, of Chicago, fought her way through a field of nearly 2,000 other women for the women's National amateur pocket billiards championship, now held by Gertrude Baker McEvoy, of New York.

"Skill in billiards should come to women more naturally than to men," says Miss Veatch, who recently won the Western women's pocket billiards championship, "because it requires, fundamentally, delicacy of touch, accuracy, patience and grace."

These qualities women possess more surely than men, she believes, whether they are used in handling a needle or a cue.

ACCORDING TO HISTORIANS, billiards had its inception in a London tailoring shop, played by eighteenth century English dandies. Today it's something of a woman's game. Women are putting billiard rooms in their homes and walking off with National championships in pocket billiard tournaments. Miss. Gertrude Baker McEvoy, above, is present holder of the National championship. Delicacy of touch, accuracy, patience and grace are necessary to excel.

Smile Cultivation Promises Return in Facial Beauty

A SMILE a day is better than a big, red apple for keeping the plastic surgeon away.

In the era of 10-inch waists when avoirdupoise was laced to a figure eight, women summoned saccharine smiles to sweeten countenances soured by hidden discomforts.

But now, when a woman's figure is controlled by little or less, and mostly neither, smiles do not have to be summoned except for flirting occasions. They come and go as freely as an employment bureau maid.

For flabby cheeks, dull eyes, languid lips and frown lines, they should be trained to appear oftener than the occasion demands. An aspirant to beauty should twist her face into a smile whenever she can. Let her coerce it once, and thereafter it comes of it, own accord. She should take advantage of leisurely moments and smile if it kills her. It won't. Smile in the tub, over the stove, first thing in the morning and last at night.

Just remember that a smile is the best setting up exercise in the world for the face and a good one for spirits immersed in "the dumps." A school of phychologists holds that one's emotions respond to bodily activity. The theory is particularly true when applied to smiles. Smile first, and feel good afterwards. One good one, or several small ones will as a general thing dry up the damp on one's disposition.

There are few faces, no matter how homely, that can't be attractive with smile illumination. The very features that contribute most strikingly to the lack of beauty are usually emphasized by a sour expression and minimized by a smile. If women would keep this in mind and give it a little thought, they would soon see what a vast difference frequent smiles make in their own faces.

They would then practice smiling not only in company where it brings congenial results, but alone where it proves a daily dozen to facial muscles, and T. N. T. to gloom.

Strawberries In Sponge Roll Tease Appetite

Good for Reviving That Desire to Eat After a Heavy Meal.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

SUPPOSE you had just been to luncheon at a ritzy hotel and partaken most bounteously of five courses. Suppose you decided to walk home, and on your way passed a pastry shop window, where, reclined on a lacy paper tray, was an enormous strawberry sponge roll. If it revived a hunger that luncheon had knocked for a row and made you want to step inside and take it home with you, you'd say it was a pretty appealing piece of cake, wouldn't you? And if after you got inside, you found the price was only 25 cents, you'd find it hard to believe, wouldn't you?

There's an actual pastry shop that has an actual roll, that will actually revive a satiated appetite. Delicious sponge cake is rolled several times around strawberries and custard filling. It's large enough to serve six people after dinner, or four before.

Luggage All-Important.

Travelers who want special attention from porters, extra service from the steward, and envious glances from their fellow passengers should consult the proprietor of a Connecticut avenue shop, who tells one how to look like a millionaire on boat, train, or plane. "You're judged by your luggage," he says. "If you'd have a real trip, do a bit of discriminating shopping in regard to hatboxes, suitcases and overnight bags."

He has the goods, too. Some of his rawhide cases, with their shiny shellac finish look like symbols of finance. They're beautifully adapted to the hundred million though, as they'll wash easily with just soap and water and look good from one year to the next.

* * * *

Convenient for Hose.

A convenient way to carry one's hose, and also the implements of darning! For details see one of the new stocking bags. They come in green, blue, or black moire, with bright checked linings. They include several spools of darning thread, scissors, needles, and thimbles, and there's still room left over for half dozen pair of hose.

* * * *

Keep Skin Natural.

The tanning problem this summer is largely a matter of taste and type, but few indeed are the sun worshipers who aren't on the lookout for a good sun-tan powder that will harmonize with brown and provide none of the yellowy sallowness frequently apparent in summer shades.

Their search would have a happy ending if they chanced upon the new tan put on the market this season by a widely known beauty house. It is available in powder form, and will soon be on hand in liquid powder. The latter is ideal for evening camouflage as it spreads evenly and smoothly over the skin and gives one a native aspect. Try it on hoseless legs, and see!

Lifetime Table.

An enormous store receives new stock so frequently that it takes something to cause a commotion. But a few days ago when a batch of card tables came in, the management, clerks and office boys perked up.

One of the tables is built for perpetual service and will serve a lifetime in any home. Metal legs and frame support a zalmite top that is proof against alcohol, fruit juice and cigarettes. It will neither chip nor crack, and may be washed off with a damp rag.

The tilt-top style has a Duncan Phyfe base. The top is covered with a parchment print, authentic reproduction of a medieval tapestry scene. Another in the same style has gold figures on a black or green background, according to the customer's choice. Bases come in either mahogany or walnut.

* * * *

Growing Sentimental.

Whether we of the City of Washington are suddenly getting sentimental, or whether sentiments are getting us is a matter of some dispute in a downtown gift shop. For there on the second floor are numerous framed "sentiments," representing griefs, joys, and occasions for celebration, which are going as fast as they come in.

The woman in charge says that for over a year these sentiments just sat, then all at once, with a splurge of popularity, on they started. Her present supply is a treat to look over. They are illustrated and hand tinted.

Clothes Protection.

Drop by the notions department of a downtown store and learn how to have a closet without building one. Here are some, with four doors that open both front and back, built of cedarized beaver board. They are 50 inches tall, 20 inches wide and 15 inches deep.

Fit one of these into a corner of your closet, the corner of your room, or even keep it in the basement, and it will serve its owner well by protecting winter clothes and woolen blankets all the hot season through.

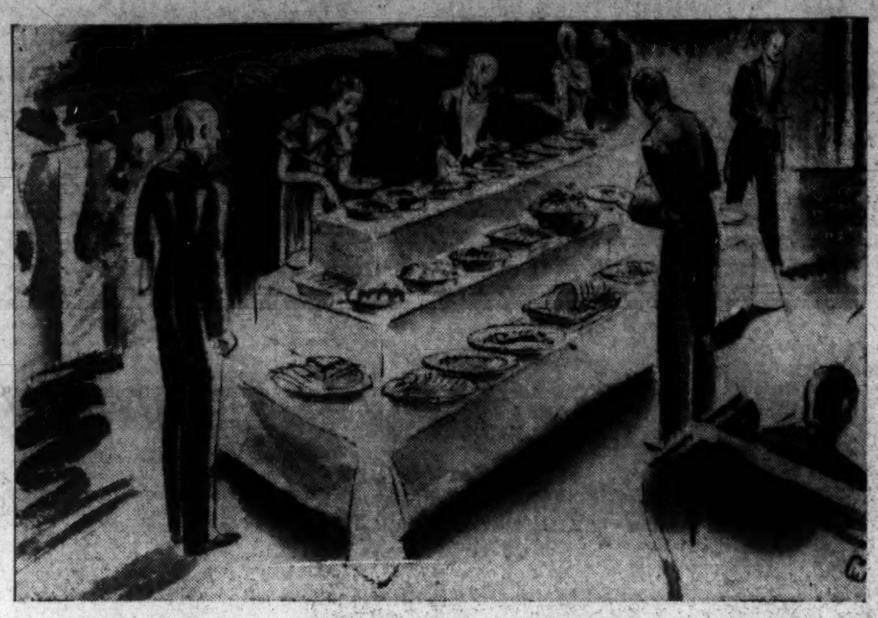
Scandinavians Have Made Fine Art Of Preparing the Hors d'Oeuvres



One Can Partake Heartily and Yet Follow With Large Dinner.

Whether made with olives or anchovies, celery or caviar, it's an hors d'oeuvre. But why and where did this delightful morsel have its beginning?

Scandivania is responsible. Today in the fourth of a series on National foods, we isolate the hors d'oeuvre, put it under the microscope and find out why and what it is when served in a Swedish restaurant.

By Susan Mills.

"WHERE shall we go to dinner?" one smart New Yorker asks another.

"To the Kungsholm. The hors d'oeuvres are so good."

"Oh, that's the place where they are all laid out and one helps oneself?"

The ladies swish their evening wraps around them and the men settle their top hats at the proper angle and to the Kungsholm they go.

In the center of the room is a large three-tiered table laden with platters of delicious things. Take your choice. You may have pickled eel, eggs deviled with anchovie, pressed hogshead meat, liver paste on appetizers, salmon mixed with mayonnaise and laid on a clam shell—pretty dish. You can have pickled herring, or white fish, typically Swedish delicacies.

Can Eat Large Quantities.

Our New Yorkers heap their plates. Will they be able to manage a dinner afterwards? Incredible as it may seem, they will.

But why and how did the hors d'oeuvre originate? The proprietor of the Kungsholm explains.

"In Scandinavian countries where the climate is cold and invigorating, the people have large appetites and must have large dinners. Too, the wife wants to please her spouse when he comes home hungry, so she prepares the best of foods for him. There, it is the woman's place to care for the home and cook for the family.

"So she makes dainty hors d'oeuvres for her husband, he comes to dinner, is pleased and all is well.

"Then, too, the waters around these countries yield all sorts of delicious fish, salmon, herring, and the rest. It is natural that we should use them."

The New Yorkers sip a cocktail with their hors d'oeuvres. What would the Scandinavians drink?

"Aquavit," says the proprietor, "it is the Scandinavian equivalent to the English whisky. It is distilled from barley, caraway seeds added for flavoring. Aquavit means literaly 'firewater.' It is as strong as the Russian vodka. We drink it in small quantities as a cocktail.

Dining Time Lengthened.

"Yes, people manage to eat many hors d'oeuvres and a dinner besides. Repeal is responsible. Cocktails stimulate the appetite and the dining room time is lengthened.

"Yet I find here that people drink moderately. They are conservative in eating and drinking."

The chef disagrees slightly with this viewpoint. He leaves the kitchen long enough to say:

"Americans are too hysterical. Yes, I mean that. They bolt their food and rush back and forth from work to parties. They ought to live more slowly and enjoy life."

He described some of the characteristics of Scandinavian cooking.

"We are strong for sauces. But the sauces must blend and agree with the dishes served with them. For instance, a chicken dish should take a chicken sauce; veal sauce should taste like veal. We do not disguise natural flavors with conflicting ones.

"One can not forget our pastry. It is famous the world over.

Orange Pudding.

"Yes, I'll give you a recipe. Here is one for an orange pudding. It will make 18 to 20 servings. Whip a pint of heavy cream, then add a pint of sweet cream. Add the juice of eight oranges and the grated peel of one. Soak 12 sheets of gelatine in water a few minutes, then dissolve over heat. Add to the cream mixture. Chill and serve. Almond flavoring may be substituted for the orange.

"Swedish pancakes are a typical and popular dish. Here is the recipe for the housewife. With the pancakes should be served a cranberry, raspberry or strawberry jam."

Sauces Must Blend and Agree With the Dishes Served With Them.

Swedish Pancakes.

1 cup flour, 2 eggs, 2 cups milk, a little sugar.

Mix ingredients together well and fry small spoonfuls in buttered skillet. Each pancake should be a little larger than a silver dollar.

Next week Susan Mills will introduce you to the cooking of the land of health, Switzerland. The recipes in which raw vegetables are used are particularly appropriate for warm weather. Watch for the article on this page next Thursday.

White to Hold Leadership In Summer Fashion Parade

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, May 30.—Women in white. No jury could disagree as to that being the prize-winning fashion play for this summer. Women in white dresses, white coats, white suits, white hats and accessories. You'll see them everywhere . . . lots of them . . . wherever fashionable women gather.

They'll wear both clear white and off-white. And as the off-whites grow deeper they become natural, another important color to have in your sports and daytime wardrobe for summer.

This summer is to be a season of pastels rather than brights. Vibrant, sunny yellow heads the fashionable list of them. It makes dresses, suits, coats and accessories.

Next in fashion importance is blue. And if you're in the pink, you're in the fashion.

Aquamarine . . . a compromise between green and blue . . . is an interesting color for silk dresses and accessories.

Darker Colors Remain.

Several of spring's favorite colors . . . darker and deeper ones . . . hold over in summer fashion, too. Navy blue, of course. Especially smart for town wear in tailored voiles, dotted Swisses and organdies. Combined with white it makes many a smart sports outfit.

Medium blue is always a good summer color. And this year is no exception. Red is prominent in plaids and stripes.

Brown is having a very successful season. It's a fine choice to make if you're buying town cottons. It goes into many prints combined with white. And in plaids and stripes it chums up with yellow and red.

Send for Color Samples.

So that you may see these summer pastels and plan which ones you want and what colors you want to wear with them, we have prepared a leaflet with actual fabric samples of them. It also gives suggestions for color combinations and what type of costumes to put these colors into.

You may have this leaflet . . . by mailing us the coupon and requested inclosure.

What Today Means

"Gemini."

If May 31 is your birthday the best hours for you on this date are from 8:30 to 10:30 a. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 11:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m., from 5:30 to 7:30 p. m. and from 10:30 p. m. until midnight.

If born on May 31 and you are of the fair sex, you are gifted with an ingenious nature, and possess a dexterity of tongue that is a continuous source of delight to your friends.

The child born on May 31, as it grows up, will show a surprising amount of grace, not only in a physical way, but in its graciousness of verbal expression.

The man born on May 31, in many cases, is "the master of his own destiny." Being endowed with an excellent mentality, a natural ability to express yourself clearly, and having qualifications for leadership, there are no limitations placed in the way for your making a success of anything you will concentrate your endeavors to accomplish, providing you select the right line of activity.

Milk Will Take Place of Pop And Hot Dogs

New York Commissioner of Parks Rules on Children's Food.

NEW YORK, May 30 (Spl.).—Orders for soda pop, candy and ice cream will not be filled on New York playgrounds after June 15, according to a recent announcement of Park Commissioner Robert Moses. Furthermore, the frankfurter, familiarly known as the hot dog, will be subject to the strictest regulations.

Soda-pop and candy stands will be replaced by ice boxes for milk, which will be sold at a cost of 4 cents a half pint.

In explanation of his order, Mr. Moses said: "The children may prefer ice cream and candy to milk, but their parents don't."

James V. Mulholland, director of recreation, said: "Soda water and ginger ale and that sort of thing are not good for children. They need more milk, particularly in the congested areas of the city where most of our playgrounds are located. We probably will sell crackers with the milk."

Mr. Mulholland estimated that the plan would result in the consumption of 2,000 more gallons of milk a day by the children.

The milk and frankfurter policies are only the beginning of the city-wide plan to improve the standard of food sold in parks and playgrounds, according to Mr. Moses.

He further pointed out that eventually strict specifications would be established for every article of food sold at park stands and restaurants.

CAPITAL KITCHEN

Hors d'Oeuvres Along the Scandinavian Line Are Appetizing.

By Susan Mills.

WHEN planning your next supper party, why not model your hors d'oeuvers along Scandinavian lines? They are delightful and delicious, and that's exactly what an appetizer should be.

You can stuff small tomatoes with chopped gherkins and shrimps, mixed with mayonnaise, or use a stuffing of tuna fish and serve with a curled anchovy on top.

Crabs on shells are attractive. Flake crab meat. Mix shreded lettuce and water cress with a sharp mayonnaise, place in crab shells and lay flaked crab on top.

Now for some of the Scandinavian mixtures to spread on bread. Spread thin slices of black bread with butter, then cheese, camembert if possible. Sprinkle with caraway seeds. This is delicious with beer.

Or, mash some hard-boiled eggs and mix with chopped pickled herring, spread on brown bread and serve on lettuce garnished with gherkins.

And mushrooms! Stew a pound of them in butter until tender, add a spoonful of cream, salt, pepper, and a quarter pound grated cheese. Mash into a fine paste. Spread toast with butter sharpened with a little mustard and cayenne pepper. Spread mushroom paste on toast and serve.

A very simple hors d'oeuvre is made with celery, chopped finely. Add to it oil cream, salt, pepper and lemon juice, and spread generously on wholewheat bread.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

The Too-Much-Blood Disease.

The people who have very red faces, from which the blood appears ready to burst, whose lips are purple, who get explosively red on exercise—which, incidentally, they bear poorly—such people may have a definite disease instead of being overly healthy. Many of those who are of this type go for years without knowing that they are not so healthy as they look and as they think themselves. They are entirely without symptoms that they regard as such. Either from the beginning or else at some point years after the beginning, they have symptoms which arouse suspicions.

Among these symptoms are mild headaches, difficult breathing, and muscular weakness or lack of endurance. Some become suspicious when, following exertion, they are too breathless, too hot, and too exhausted.

If they are examined by a physician who is informed and alert a blood examination will be made. This will show just the opposite of what is disclosed by blood examination in case of anemia. The blood is too rich, contains too many red corpuscles, too many reticulocytes and too much coloring matter.

Physicians are not certain they know the cause of the disease or the treatment best for it. For a while the approved treatment consisted in periodic bleeding. This, superficially considered, seemed a logical treatment. In time the bleeding treatment, called venesection, fell into disrepute. Dr. E. H. Malconer thinks it deserves a better place in treatment than it now enjoys.

As an emergency treatment, used especially to relieve difficult breathing, too much heat reaction after exercise, and possibly dizziness, it is the best we have. As a treatment which runs to the roots of the disorder, physicians give phenyl-hydrazine hydrochloride internally and radiate the spleen and the long bones.

The disease was originally described by Vaquez, but it was brought to the attention of physicians in English-speaking countries by Dr. William Osler.

The Talking Sparrow Murders

BY DARWIN TEILHET

The Story So Far.

"A sparrow down there spoke to me. It said distinctly, 'Help! I'm caught!'" With these strange words, Kohlmann, the big industrialist, fell, shot, at Tatson's feet as he was crossing a Heidelberg street. Tatson was an American engineer, in a hurry to get home to a job which wouldn't wait. He was arrested, and then released on parole through the efforts of Carlson, his business friend at the plant not far from Heidelberg. But instead of proving his innocence, Tatson seemed every day to become more involved in Kohlmann's murder. In fact, many people were now involved in its web; Spalger, accountant at the bank, also murdered, leaving behind a shortage in his accounts; Geigen, who was buying the plant, and his fiancee, Elaine Edrich, who had been Kohlmann's ward; Taubek, the Nazi leader, who had tried to kill Tatson; Walther Kohlmann, who was reported away on business and didn't come home even for his father's funeral; the mysterious La Roc, with his many letters from brokers; charming, half-Jewish Mischa Dryshenzoff, fleeing from Nazi brutalities, yet apparently working with a Nazi, and finally, Carlson, of the plant, always offering to assist Tatson.

Mischa, whose fortunes seemed somehow linked to those of Tatson, helped him to escape from Taubek, the two fleeing to the Dolphin Inn. There Tatson left her, to seek help from the police, only to discover that the Dolphin was Taubek's stronghold. In terror he rushed back to it and found a gory scene. Taubek, the innkeeper and the cook were dead. Geigen had been seen near the inn at the time of the murders. Mischa had disappeared and Tatson confessed to his friend Carlson that he didn't want to leave Heidelberg until she had been found.

Now let Tatson himself go on with the story:

I STOPPED the taxi at the next corner, bought a paper from the stand:

"Police Report No Results in Kohlmann Investigation.

"Strange Absence of Walter Kohlmann From Heidelberg.

"Mannheim and Heidelberg police report that they have been unable to trace the murderers of the late Herr Witmel Kohlmann, who was shot on March 27. . . .

"Herr Walther Kohlmann, son of the murdered industrialist, is reported to be still in Paris on business matters connected with his father's firm. The absence of the son has caused considerable discussion. The report is that Heidelberg police are arranging to have the son brought back at once. . . ."

The rest of the story was a rehash of what had passed before. The newspaper had been published too soon to include the latest developments—Taubek's death.

I paid the driver and went up to my room. I'd finished my dressing about five minutes before, and just as I was rushing out to keep my appointment with Kresch, I discovered the note slipped under my door which I had overlooked on entering.

The landlady had written it. A Fraulein Edrich had telephoned at 7 o'clock this morning.

Elaine Makes Plea.

Elaine answered the phone herself. Usually one of the maids answered.

"Bill! I've been trying to get you since early morning. Where have you been?" She rushed on, giving no time for explanations. "Bill—I'm—I'm in trouble. You've got to come over right away. Not here. Meet me in front of the Schloss. You know where the rose gardens are? Meet me there as soon as you can. Please!"

"I can't come now, Elaine. I have to be at the police station. Kresch is waiting for me. Later . . ."

"Bill!" Her voice broke dismally. "Let Kresch go."

The old Kirche clock's bells stroked the prelude to 1. Down the long road came the tinkling single bell of the little Dissenters' church and a few minutes later the long drawn-out, clanging boom, far away and heavy, of the Molkenkur. I told Elaine that I would telephone her as soon as I had seen Kresch, and I ran downstairs.

Kresch was at his desk. "Will you please give us an exact description of the missing girl, this Fraulein Dryshenzoff? It will save time to have you help us instead of summoning some one from the Swimming Stone."

"Of course," I replied. Then stopped. "You saw Geigen?"

An Arrest Made.

"Herr Geigen is under arrest," answered Kresch. "Unless his lawyers have got him out, which I doubt."

"He confessed?"

"He said that he was called to the inn by Herr Taubek and that as he came up to the inn he saw this girl run away from it. When he entered the inn all three were dead."

Kresch motioned the stenographer away. "That's all, Schmidt. Don't type what you've taken down." He swallowed. "That is all Herr Tat-zohn—thank you."

I picked up my hat. "You won't need me?"

"No."

"I hope you find her."

"According to your description you hope I find a large woman with blonde hair and big nose?"

"Well—yes."

"But not Fraulein Dryshenzoff?" He picked up a photograph on his desk and handed it to me. "We found this in her dressing room at the Swimming Stone."

Elaine Arrived.

Through the roses, above and at the end of the gardens, part of the old Schloss was visible. Elaine saw me and hurried to my table. She was dressed in blue, with long floating skirts, as if she had come directly from an afternoon garden party. She carried her closed parasol and the sun was caught and shone in her hair. Her cheeks were flushed; she was all white and pink.

Elaine slumped in the wicker chair, dropping her frilled parasol to the ground. "Order me a Martini, Bill. I walked all the way as soon as you telephoned. I'm burning up."

I picked up her parasol. "Let's go to the other side of the castle. There's a breeze up there. It'll do you more good than anything else."

The Grosse Batterie is a winding, narrow terrace, sprinkled with yellow flowers, below the part of the Heidelberg castle called the "English Building." There is a series of stairs leading down to the Grosse Batterie and we stopped just at the foot of the tower.

Heidelberg was below us. The Neckar came down through the mountains from the south and trailed lazily over the plain between Heidelberg and Mannheim.

"I'm sorry I couldn't come when I telephoned, but I had to see Kresch. I'm free to leave Heidelberg now."

"I'm in trouble, Bill. I want you to help me. I don't want Otto to know. Herr Taubek's trying to blackmail me. I met Herr Taubek at a party in Mannheim. He seemed nice and he was a beautiful dancer."

"That was an excuse for him to blackmail you?"

Girl Seemed Nervous.

"You shouldn't say things like that," she exclaimed with a tremulous little catch. "Herr Taubek invited me to come to the Swimming Stone. I thought it would be an adventure."

"How many adventures did you have there?"

"I only went once. Just once. And I only stayed there for a tiny minute. Herr Taubek wanted me to stay longer. I refused. Now he's blackmailing me."

"Because you stayed for a tiny minute?"

"Don't joke, Bill, darling. He says he is going to tell—tell Otto horrible things. They're all untrue. Otto won't believe them. But I don't want anything to spoil our marriage."

I leaned back against the old wall. Rose thorns pricked my hands.

"You mean you don't want a scandal?"

"It would be terrible, wouldn't it?" She opened her little Cordova bag with a business-like click. "You will do this for me, won't you, Bill, because we've been such awfully good friends?"

"Awfully good, Elaine."

She patted my hand tenderly. "I'm glad, Bill. Now, here's the money. It's ten thousand marks."

"For him to keep quiet?"

"Yes."

"How do you know I'll remain quiet?"

His Trust Implored.

This sideswiped her for a moment. The lovely blue eyes blinked. "Bill, darling, I would always trust you. We two know we can trust each other. Don't you remember? That's what you said yourself."

"When I was telling you about our plant?"

"Yes. And I can trust you as you trusted me. I know I can, darling."

"You said if I loved you I should be able to trust you enough to tell you how much your guardian, Herr Kohlmann, was offering us for the plant."

"Yes, and you proved you could trust me, and now I prove I can trust you. Here's the money."

It's funny how you feel when you all at once stop loving a person. It's like being smashed up in a wreck, or being drunk—or a little of both, and you don't care very much what you do or say.

"Just a moment, Elaine. Suppose I see Taubek this afternoon. You will be home tonight?"

"Not tonight, Bill. I'm having dinner with Otto."

"I mean after dinner."

"We're going to a show."

"After the show. Or perhaps you don't understand?"

Informed of Death.

But she did.

"Let Otto give him the money then. I'm going to America."

"You're going to America? You're not coming back?"

"I'm not coming back."

"After the show then. I'll meet you at 12. But you can't come to the house. You can wait for me in the gardens in your car. And I can't stay with you any longer than an hour."

"You're really coming?"

"But no longer than an hour, Bill. I don't dare to stay longer. You understand, don't you? It's not that I don't love you——"

"I understand, all right."

"Then you will give Herr Taubek his money this afternoon?"

"Taubek is dead," I said. "He was killed early this morning."

"Dead?"

"Yes. Here's your money. You won't have to worry about him."

Something was happening to her face. "You—let me tell you all of this?"

Anger stamped ugly red blotches on the smooth pink and white face.

"You learned the price of the plant from me. You promised to lend Geigen enough money to permit him to sign up the plant."

"Let me go! Let me go at once."

"Of course. I think I've been stupid, don't you? It was lucky for you that your guardian, Herr Koalmann, died!"

She lifted the parasol, smashed it on my head, hoisted her garden-party skirts and ran up the steps. I watched her blue dress flicking up the steps like a crazy piece of bunting caught in a mounting draft of hot wind.

She reached the Dickerturm, disappeared inside it. I stepped back under the stone arch.

The jagged rock crashed down from the Dickerturm. It hit the steps we had been standing on, bounced heavily down the remaining steps into the strip of garden. I looked cautiously up along the tower. Elaine was peering out 20 feet above me. She disappeared as soon as she saw me.

Mary Pickford's Occupancy of Pickfair Construed as Sign of Reconciliation

Doug and Mary Believed Once More at Peace

Pair Conferred Recently; Marshall to Sing Here; News of Amusements.

Reprinted from yesterday's last edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Although this column never has been able to agitate itself appreciably over the past, present or future status of the Mary Pickford-Douglas Fairbanks "perfect love," owing to the circumstances of its inception, it is, perhaps, worthy of note that certain recent signs and portents seem to indicate that a great deal of the chatter about their divorce was merely a great deal of chatter about their divorce.

Taken as most significant is the press report that comes sizzling over the United Press wire under the by-line of an outpost by the name of Leicester Wagner to the effect that Miss Pickford on last Thursday moved into Pickfair, the Beverly Hills mansion she and the senior Doug built some 15 years ago.

When Miss Pickford filed her suit for divorce several months ago, she placed Pickfair on the market. The listing was canceled several weeks ago. Those privy to the confidence of them both construed this to mean that a definite reconciliation between the "King and Queen of Hollywood" had been effected.

In Constant Touch.

It is accepted as common knowledge in the film colony, according to reliable report, that Miss Pickford and the self-expatriated senior Fairbanks have been in almost constant touch with each other by cable, telephone and personal courier for the past two months.

Granting that all this is so, what of it?

There never has been, it seems to me, a more over-inflated "romance" in the entire history of filmdom than this one. Why its cracking up should become a matter of international concern, columns of sob-sister lamentation and reams of rhapsodic remorse is one of the complex mysteries of human nature and psychology.

"As Ye Sow——"

There was none of that when the Owen Moore-Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks-Beth Sully "perfect romances" were shot to ribbons by the Pickford-Fairbanks infatuation, so why should there be now?

At any rate, indications are that Pickfair will continue to be a symbol of this golden connubial bliss for a time yet, at least, so you may sleep peacefully and have happy dreams once again without the horrid nightmares of a Pickford-Fairbanks domestic cataclysm to blast your slumbers.

All of which may now be discreetly filed under the respective headings of banana oil, malarkey and just plain phooey!

Buddy and Vilma Ebsen, those two extraordinary young dancers last seen here with the Shuberts' idea of the "Ziegfeld Follies," will be guests at the Shoreham when they arrive in town late Thursday for a week of personal appearances with Abe Lyman's orchestra, headlining next week's stage show at Loew's Fox Theater. The bulletin from Ruth Barnard goes on to say that Ruth Cambridge may come down to spend the week-end with them. Miss Cambridge, in private life, is Mrs. Buddy Ebsen; Vilma is his sister. In keyhole life, Miss Cambridge is that columnist's "Girl Friday."

To See Old Friend.

Impresario Stephen E. Cochran, Freddie Sherman, Kathryn Givney, Burke Clarke, Mrs. Adelaide Hibbard, Mary Loane, Romaine Callender and other members of the National Theater Players, with whom he played at the National, will be guests of the Warner Brothers' local executives and the Earle Theater tomorrow night at 11:15 for a special screening in the private projection room in the Earle Theater Building of "Merry Wives of Reno," the first Warner Brothers picture in which Donald Wood, former leading man of the Players, will be seen in Washington.

It was while playing with the National Theater Players last season that scouts for the Warner studios "discovered" Mr. Wood and lured him away to emote opposite the foremost stars of Hollywood. Warner studio officials have been warm in their praise of this handsome young actor and have laid plans to feature him opposite such stars as Bette Davis, Barbara Stanwyck, Joan Blondell and Kay Francis.

"Merry Wives of Reno" opens at the Earle on Friday. This, however, is not the first picture in which Donald Wood appeared on the Coast. It was preceded by "As the Earth Turns," a picturization of the Carroll novel of simple New England farm life. "As the Earth Turns" will be shown at the Metropolitan Theater the week of June 8.

While the National Theater Players are at it, they plan to take Thursday off and visit the Navy Yard, thence motoring to Annapolis and the Naval Academy just to become mildly acclimated to the atmosphere and "feel" of "Sailor, Beware," the rowdy comedy in which they will appear at the National for the week beginning next Monday night. Had we known the Navy Yard and Naval Academy were like that, we'd all have been down there long ago!

"Two Tickets to Georgia."

Come Friday, Orangelo Ratto—"Angie" to you, if you have lived here over a month—who for many years has presided over the destinies of Loew's Palace Theater in a managerial capacity, will set sail for the South for the first time in his life.

With the coming of the annual vacation Friday morning, Angie and a close friend will embark in the trusty old sedan and head for the "romantic charm and hospitality" of which they have heard so long as characterizing life and customs below the Mason-Dixon Line.

The tour is planned to penetrate the Carolinas and possibly get into the remote areas of Georgia, with fishing and other summer sports to occupy the idle moments between gas stations and hot-dog stands.

While Angie looks forward to the exploit with utmost zeal and enthusiasm, there is a single unfortunate fly in the ointment.

"I'm just afraid," says he, "that unless I shave off my white goatee, I'll come back a colonel and Col. Harry Long, Loew District manager, automatically will have to demote me!"

If they can't both be kernels, maybe one or the other will turn out to be a nut!

While Angie Ratto is busy dodging colonelcies in the deep So'th, his place at the Palace will be filled by Roscoe Drissel, former house manager at Loew's Fox, recently promoted to an itinerant managerial post for Loew in the Washington territory. A cordial note from Roscoe, date-lined Richmond, yesterday brought word that he is thoroughly sold on his new assignment—which, of course, is half of it. In passing, he remarks that "Sadie McKee," set back a week at the Palace, is "doing very nicely" in the Virginia capital.

Sam Harris Hits.

It is Mr. John Peter Toohey, one of the most scholarly of the Broadway mentors, who calls attention to the fact that since the severance of his famous partnership with George M. Cohan, just 15 years ago, Sam H. Harris, producer of "As Thousands Cheer," the outstanding success of the New York season just ending, has sponsored at least one "smash hit" a year.

A "smash hit," in the terminology of Broadway, is a show which sells out the second night and runs at least eight months.

Here are the shows coming under that classification produced by Mr. Harris since 1919: The four Music Box Revues, "Captain Applejack," "The Nervous Wreck," "Six-Cylinder Love," "Rain," "Cradle Snatchers," "Nice People," "The Cocoanuts," "Animal Crackers," "June Moon," "Once in a Lifetime," "Of Thee I Sing," "Dinner at Eight," "As Thousands Cheer."

This is a record not even remotely approached by any other American theatrical producer.

Everett Marshall, distinguished American barytone, a favorite of stage, screen and radio, will contribute an important part to the program on June 11 attending the formal dedication of the new Federal Postoffice Department Building. Marshall, now appearing at the Capitol Theater in New York, will come to Washington especially for this event and will sing "My Wild Irish Rose" at one juncture in the ceremonies, which he will appropriately climax by singing "The Star-Spangled Banner." Postmaster General James A. Farley will lead a long list of dignitaries who also will take part in the festivities. The program will begin at 2:30 on the afternoon of Monday, June 11, according to announcement of the committee in charge.

Philately Note.

The special stamp in commemoration of this occasion, Mr. Postmaster General, should be symbolic of "Wagon Wheels," "That's Why Darkies Were Born," and "To the Beat of the Heart," in case you missed George White's "Scandals" and the "Follies."

Favorites in New Photoplays

The debonair Mr. James Don Juan Casanova Durante, pictured above at left, returns to the local screen today at RKO-Keith's, as costar with Lupe Velez in an idyllic little thing known as "Strictly Dynamite"—which is practically what it is. On the right, you will recognize Miss Glenda Farrell, one of the more agile comediennes, in the new comedy smash, "Merry Wives of Reno," opening on the Earle screen Friday morning.

The Osculatory Mae West Is a Trifle Too Explosive; Dorothy Lee Is Humbled by a Beach Artist; Echoes of Hollywood Boulevard.

Reproduced From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Grace Kingsley.

Hollywood, May 29.—Mae West's kisses were giving her sound men headaches yesterday. The trio of expert sound technicians, recording "It Ain't No Sin," had found the siren's voice a cinch to handle. But yesterday she started a love scene with her leading man, Roger Pryor.

DOROTHY LEE.

"Smack!" went the first kiss, and Soundman E. L. Kerr demanded another "take," so that he could pull the microphone back a bit and diminish the aural result of Mae's osculation. "Smack!" went the second. And Harry Mills, the sound mixer, found there was still too much volume sizzling over the wires.

Director Leo McCarey cautioned Mae to "take it easy," and she agreed. But the third attempt again shocked the recording apparatus. Then Mae informed all present that if she kissed her leading man at all, she would have to do it soundly—let the sound fall where it may and how. The problem was finally solved by wrapping silk over the business end of the "mike."

"I never could kiss with the meter on," explained Mae.

She Can Take It.

Dorothy Lee says all her vanity is gone. She met a down-and-out artist painting temporary waterproof tattoos of the favorite movie stars on the arms of beach bathers yesterday.

The artist approached Dorothy as a prospect, and she accepted. Asked who was her favorite star, Dorothy answered, "Dorothy Lee, of course." The artist didn't recognize her.

When the portrait was finished, Dorothy said, "Why, that doesn't look like Dorothy Lee." And the artist came back with "Don't kid yourself; I've flattered her!"

Lonaconing Exercises Held.

Lonaconing, Md., May 30 (Spl.).—Exercises were held in Oak Hill Cemetery this morning under the direction of James F. Love Post, No. 92, American Legion. Previously the Lonaconing City Band visited Oak Hill, St. Mary's Catholic and Old Coney Cemeteries.

"Why are Old Golds so uniformly good, so unvarying in throat-ease and flavor?" asks Joan Blondell

Dear Miss Blondell:—

We are told that you know how to make a wonderful chocolate cake.

You may not use scientific methods. But we'll wager you measure out each ingredient with unfailing accuracy.

That's how carefully we blend Old Gold tobaccos. In a hundred Old Golds, the proportion of the various kinds of Turkish and domestic tobacco does not vary a fraction of a gram. And every type of tobacco used is of true queen-leaf quality, rich in natural flavor.

The same care goes into our manufacturing and packaging, too. For Old Gold must reach you well filled, full weight, and truly factory-fresh.

Sincerely,
P. LORILLARD COMPANY, INC.
ESTABLISHED 1760

P. S.—Remember this especially, Miss Blondell: No better tobacco grows than is used in Old Gold. And it's pure. Easy on the THROAT and NERVES.

100,000 Honor Cardinal Gibbons in Baltimore Tercentenary Memorial Mass

More than 100,000 Catholics of the Archdiocese of Baltimore staged one of the greatest celebrations in the history of the church, in the Maryland metropolis yesterday, honoring the 300th anniversary of the founding of the Church in Maryland and the 100th anniversary of the birth of one of the outstanding American ecclesiastics, the late James Cardinal Gibbons, ninth Archbishop of Baltimore. With 20,000 visitors from Washington, 75,000 marched in a huge parade to Baltimore Stadium, shown in the above panoramic view, where Archbishop Michael J. Curley was the leading participant in the celebration of Solemn Pontifical Military Mass. Georgetown University R. O. T. C. and St. John's College Cadets were guards of honor at the mass, during which more than 1,000 fainted from the heat.

Priests studying at Catholic University and Washington parochial schools had a prominent part in yesterday's parade in Baltimore celebrating the 300th anniversary of the founding of the Catholic Church in Maryland and the 100th anniversary of the birth of Cardinal Gibbons. Above, left to right, in the line of march are priests from Catholic University, girl students from Sacred Heart Academy, Gonzaga High School boys, and St. Cecilia's Academy students. Every church and parochial school in the Capital was represented.

100,000 Hear Mass Marking Maryland Fete

Parade Held in Baltimore as Catholics Observe 300th Anniversary.

By Marion Butler.

Baltimore, May 30.—To bugle notes and the roll of cannon and drum, solemn pontificial military mass was celebrated in Baltimore Stadium here today by Archbishop Michael J. Curley before more than 100,000 persons.

One of the greatest religious celebrations ever staged in America, the occasion marked the formal observance by Catholics of the Archdiocese of Baltimore of the 300th anniversary of the founding of the Catholic Church in Maryland. It also paid tribute to the centennial of the birth of James Cardinal Gibbons, ninth archbishop of Baltimore and one of the greatest figures in United States church history.

Eighteen hundred men, women and children required first-aid treatment. Although the day was not oppressively hot, the more than two hours required for the huge parade resulted in hundreds being overcome. More than 400 were treated for fainting. Hundreds of others received injuries, none serious. The patients were handled by an emergency hospital at the stadium.

20,000 From District.

Leaving at intervals of 10 minutes, 11 special trains carried nearly 20,000 Washington Catholics here early this morning. Marylanders from every county in the State, and spectators from bordering States also packed streets and stadium.

Seventy-five thousand Catholics marched in the parade, whose ecclesiastical section alone comprised 5,000. Mounted police and many of the famous uniformed bands of the East added to the riot of color provided by thousands of American and Maryland banners held in the hands of the marchers. Sixty-five band units and ten fife and drum corps took part.

The parade was reviewed by notables in a flag-draped reviewing stand at Thirty-third street and Ednor avenue. These included 12 members of the hierarchy, among them Archbishop Curley and the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate to the United States; Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, Mayor Howard Jackson, and many notables of the Maryland State and National Governments.

5,000 Children Sing.

Following the parade and the seating of thousands in the stadium a special procession formed, resplendent with the crosses and robes of the Catholic church. Walking slowly to the altar at the north end of the stadium, church and State dignitaries took their places for the mass. Back of the altar, stood a choir of 5,000 children. Massed American, Papal and Maryland banners were grouped with their flag-bearers to one side of the altar, while before the altar a human cross was formed by members of the R. O. T. C. units of Georgetown University and the St. John's Cadets.

The solemn mass was opened by Archbishop Curley singing the words "Gratias Agamus Domino Deo Nostro" (Let us Give Thanks to the Lort, Our God).

Just 300 years ago, one March day in 1634, these same words were sung on lonely St. Clement's Island, in the Potomac, first landing place of Maryland's Ark and Dove colonists, by Father Andrew White, Jesuit missionary, and Maryland's first historian.

Today's ceremonies commemorated this first mass on Maryland soil, and Archbishop Curley pontificated before the same historical tabernacle said to have been used by Father White.

Wears Carroll Cross.

Archbishop Curley wore at the service the famed Episcopal cross of Bishop John Carroll, first Bishop and Archbishop of Baltimore, and Father of the American Hierarchy.

Honoring the memory of the Jesuit Fathers White and Altham, he was assisted at the mass by the Very Rev. Edward C. Phillips, provincial of the Maryland-New York Province of the Society of Jesus.

Mgr. Harry A. Quinn, rector of Baltimore Cathedral, and the Rev. W. Carroll Milholland, of St. Clement's Church, Landsdowne, Md., were masters of ceremonies. Deacons of honor to the archbishop were the Very Rev. Ferdinand C. Wheeler, S. J., president of Loyala High School, and the Very Rev. Eugene F. Harrigan, S. S., president of St. Charles College. Deacon and subdeacon for the mass were the Rev. W. Paul Smith, pastor of St. Paul's Church, and the Very Rev. Henri J. Wiesel, S. J., president of Loyola College.

Dr. Guilday Preaches.

The tercentenary sermon was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Peter Guilday, professor of church history at Catholic University and noted Catholic historian.

During the solemn moments of the service, bugles sounded and cannon, in charge of soldiers of the 110th Field Artillery, boomed outside the stadium.

Altar boys, numbering 1,250 from Baltimore and 1,000 from Washington, stood in line in their black and white vestments. Under the direction of the Rev. J. Leo Barley, chairman of the Archdiocesan Commission on Liturgical Music, a choir of 7,000 children sang the music of the mass, and at the offertory the 'Ave Stella Maris," by Father Barley. Following the service, the choir, assisted by the St. Mary's Industrial School Band, sang "Holy God, we Praise Thy Name," "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "Maryland, My Maryland."

Both mass and music were broadcast over a Nation-wide NBC hookup.

Nuns Offer Prayers.

During the celebration, throughout the country, special prayers were offered up by members of the cloistered sisterhoods and priests in far-off States. Sisters of the Atonement at the Washington Retreat House exposed the Blessed Sacrament through the day for the success of the celebration.

Prominent among the church dignataries who attended the tercentennial services were:

The Most Rev. John T. McNicholas, O. P., Archbishop of Cincinnati; the Most Rev. Patrick Barry, Bishop of Savannah, Ga.; the Most Rev. Edmond Francis P. Keough, Bishop of Providence, R. I.; the Most Rev. John J. Swint, Bishop of Wheeling, W. Va.; the Most Rev. Michael J. Keyes, Bishop of Savannah, Ga.; the Most Rev. Edmond J. FitzMaurice, Bishop of Wilmington, Del.; the Most Rev. Emmet M. Walsh, Bishop of Charleston, S. C.; the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, Auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore; the Most Rev. Joseph H. Albers, Auxiliary Bishop of Cincinnati; the Most Rev. James Hugh Ryan, Titular Bishop of Modra, and rector of Catholic University; Msr. Michael J. Lavelle, P. A., rector of St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York, and the Rev. Joseph Kelly, S. J., of St. Aloysius Church, Washington.

Director of the celebration was the Rev. Louis C. Vaeth. Lieut. Col. Thomas G. McNicholas, of the Maryland National Guard, was in charge of the procession. Chief marshal of the parade was George T. Evans.

Among the units in the parade were the Georgetown University Band, Jesuit scholastics from Woodstock College, students from Gonzaga College High School, George Preparatory School, Loyola College, Loyola High School; members of the following religious orders, Marists, Salvatorians, Holy Cross Fathers, Franciscans, Christian Brothers, Claretians, Capuchins, Augustinians, Friars of the Atonement, Capuchins, Oblates of Mary, Dominicans, students from the houses of study at Catholic University, St. Mary's Seminary, Mount Saint Mary's Seminary, the faculty of Catholic University, Holy Name Societies from Southern Maryland, Baltimore and Washington, St. Andrew's Band of Baltimore.

The Knights of Columbus, the St. Vincent de Paul Society, Curley Club, Catholic League, Catholic Fraternity, Ancient Order of Hibernians, Catholic Daughters of America, International Federation of Catholic Alumnae, Maryland Colonial Society, Ladies of Charity, Catholic Nurses, Knights of St. John Band, Knights of St. John, Knights of St. Augustine, Ladies Auxiliary of the Knights of St. John, St. Monica's Band, the Sodality Union of Washington, the Holy Comforter's Boys Band of Washington, Sodality Union of Baltimore and Gonzaga College Cadets.

Little Ad Brings Big Results

W. D. Poole, a used clothing and furniture dealer at 126 G street northwest, ran a two-line ad in the Classified Section of The Washington Post for one week, under the classification "Wanted to Buy."

Richmond Pays Honor to Dead

Exercises Held at Capitol and Two Soldier Cemeteries.

Richmond, May 30 (AP).—Memorial Day speakers here today paid tribute to Virginians who died on Flanders fields, who died at Bull Run and Gettysburg, who died in the Spanish-American campaigning.

Richmond, where Northern troops swept through after four years of fratricidal strife, found time to honor the foe in Blue as well as the men in Gray who guarded the capital of the Confederacy.

At Capitol Square, where State Senator Robert O. Norris, of Lancaster County, made the chief address, military units, including the historic Richmond Blues, Grays and Howitzers, participated. Col. Robert Tibarton spoke for the World War veterans.

At Seven Pines, where the seven sentinel trees still stand inside the walls that inclose the burial ground, other ceremonies were held. Lieut. Gov. Price presided at the Hollywood Cemetery exercises, attended by Gov. Peery and his staff.

Jackson's Grave Gets Blooms Picked at Scene of His Death

Lexington, Va., May 30 (Spl.). "Stonewall" Jackson's grave at Lexington was decorated today by a wreath of wild flowers picked at the spot near Chancellorsville in the Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania National Park where he was mortally wounded by his own men, May 2, 1863.

Fredericksburg Battlefield Park employes gathered the flowers, which were sent through the Fredericksburg Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy to Mrs. E. D. Strain, president of the Lexington U. D. C., who placed the wreath.

Memorial exercises beginning at 11 a. m. at Lexington ended with placing of the wreath at 12:30. Maj. Gen. John A. Lejeune, superintendent of the Virginia Military Institute and former commander of the Marine Corps, delivered an address. There was a parade in which V. M. I. cadets marched.

George A. Palmer, historic technician of the Battlefield Park here, and his assistant, John T. Goolrick, planned the placing of the wreath.

The historic precedent of the wild-flower wreath was established at Jackson's own funeral. When "Stonewall" Jackson was buried there were no other flowers available, and the people who attended the last rites of Gen. Lee's "right arm" heaped the mound with wild flowers.

Parade Marks Annapolis Rite

Veterans March; Tablet Is Unveiled to Honor Soldier Dead.

Annapolis, May 30 (Spl.).—Members of Annapolis Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and the several local patriotic organizations, in addition to Company M, First Maryland Infantry, and a detachment of bluejackets from ships at the Naval Academy, paraded in observance of Memorial Day here.

The Naval Academy Band headed the line of march. Graves in the Naval and National Cemeteries were decorated by the veterans. At the Naval Cemetery an address was delivered by Dr. Wirt A. Duvall, of Baltimore. Lieut. David L. Quinn, assistant chaplain of the Naval Academy, spoke at the National Cemetery.

Officially the day was marked by a salute of 21 guns from the Naval Academy shore battery. Federal, State, municipal and county offices and banking institutions and most business houses were closed. American Legion posts of Annapolis, Glen Burnie and Linthicum Heights joined in dedicating a bronze tablet on the new bridge over South River in memory of Anne Arundel County's World War dead. The tablet was to Skinner Carr, killed in action, and the unveiling was by his nephew, Francis Gasperich. C. L. Aiello, department commander of the legion, and State Senator Ridgely P. Melvin spoke.

Middletown Grange Plans Picnic July 21

Middletown, Va., May 30 (Spl.). Middletown Grange will hold its sixth annual Shenandoah Valley Farmers and Grangers picnic here July 21, when several Nationally-known Grange leaders will deliver addresses.

Among the speakers will be John A. McSparrow, Pennsylvania secretary of agriculture and past master of the Pennsylvania State Grange; Fred Brenkman, Washington, representative of the National Grange; A. Willis Robertson, Lexington, Va., member of the House of Representatives, and Louis J. Taber, master of the National Grange.

New Courses Are Scheduled For Teachers

Virginia Dean Outlines Plans for Sessions During Summer.

Charlottesville, Va., May 30 (Spl.). Dr. Charles G. Maphis, dean of the University of Virginia summer session, arranged several new courses to enable public school teachers to assist in the three-year curriculum revision program as proposed by the State Department of Education for elementary and secondary schools.

An important State-wide conference on the new curriculum program will be held at the University of Virginia, August 20-31. Invitations urging all division superintendents, principals and supervisors of the secondary school system to attend have been issued by Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, and Dr. John Lloyd Newcomb, president of the University of Virginia.

The services of several Nationally known educators have been obtained to assist in the conference.

Invitations will be exteded representatives of Virginia colleges, the Virginia Academy of Science, the Virginia Association of Social Science, the Trustees Association, the Virginia branch of the Congress of Parents and Teachers, and other groups.

The principal subjects for study deal with the administrative duties of superintendents, supervisors and principals under the revised program, and planning for installation of new courses of study.

Anniversary of Davis' Birth to Be Observed

Front Royal, Va., May 30 (Spl.).—The anniversary of the birthday of Jefferson Davis will be observed here with a program Sunday afternoon, sponsored by the historical committee of Warren Rifles Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy.

There will be a historical address by Dr. John W. Wayland, of Harrisonburg State Teachers College.

Equipoise Beaten a Nose by Ladysman in 48th Suburban Handicap

Coucci Star Of Brilliant Finish

Rider Barely Staves Off Whitney Ace's Drive; Victor Pays 6-1.

20-Pound Weight Shift Favors Winner; War Glory Is Third.

By Orlo Robertson.

NEW YORK, May 30 (AP).—Burdened with 134 pounds, C. V. Whitney's Equipoise, America's handicap champion, found the assignment of matching the speed of a lightly weighted horse, aided by the great riding of Silvio Coucci, too great a task today as he finished second to W. R. Coe's Ladysman in the forty-eighth running of the Suburban Handicap at Belmont Park.

Only a nose separated the pair at the finish of the 1¼ miles following a stretch drive that brought 30,000 spectators to their feet as they saw the famous chestnut from the Whitney barns put up one of the greatest fights of his career. Ten lengths back was Samuel Riddle's War Glory in front of five other high-class performers.

To Coucci goes much of the credit for Ladysman's victory. He rated the chestnut son of Pompey perfectly and in the long drive for the judges stand outrode Alfred (Slim) Robertson, who replaced Raymond Workman on Equipoise. Workman was set down for the remainder of the meeting ten days ago when Equipoise was disqualified after finishing first in the metropolitan mile.

The second place earned Equipoise only $1,000 and sent his total earnings to $333,960, still far short of his goal of Sun Beau's record of $376,744. Ladysman, generally recognized as the champion juvenile of 1932, picked up $5,750 and paid his backers 6 to 1. Equipoise was the 3 to 5 choice.

In running the best race since his juvenile campaign, Ladysman reeled off the distance in the fast time of 2:02 3-5 under the light weight of 114 pounds, 20 less than Ekky was asked to carry.

Coucci shot Ladysman away from the barrier in the first flight and in the run down the back stretch held the Coe colt in either second or third place back of the fast-traveling Faireno, from William Woodward's barns. Meanwhile, as usual, Equipoise was among the trailers, swinging along in beautiful stride, apparently able to take the lead whenever Robertson desired.

Ladysman in Front.

At the far turn Ladysman forged to the front by the narrowest of margins, but the Whitney chestnut also had moved into third place. They swung around the bend without changing positions, but as Ladysman turned for the judges' stand, Equipoise charged forward to take command.

"There he comes," went the roar from the crowd. And sure enough Equipoise had turned on the steam. But unlike other races, Ladysman refused to quit. Coucci went to work on the Pompey colt and he hung on tenaciously. They matched stride for stride, with Equipoise holding his nose in front. Only a couple of more jumps were left when Coucci fairly lifted his mount forward and in the last stride he got up to take the decision.

The victory capped a day of triumphs for Coucci, known as the "Bronx Express." He brought Mrs. Payne Whitney's Plateye home in the Juvenile Stakes to earn the purse of $5,710, and won the Memorial Day Handicap with C. V. Whitney's Halcyon. He also finished second in the sixth race and third in the first.

Nats Defeated, 5-4, in 11th After Winning Opener by 1-0

forced Lazzeri, the fellow who was to be the hero of the second game, to pop harmlessly to Cronin. And when Dickey smashed a hot grounder to Bluege, who stepped on third base for a force-out, the Nats' 1-0 triumph was sealed.

That was a ball game to watch. The Nats by their triumph inflicted his first defeat of the season on the slender Yankees' southpaw, Lefty Gomez, who had been cutting a wide swathe through the league with his seven consecutive shut-out victories.

The man who put the skids under Gomez was big Fred Schulte, who had been staging a one-man batting show throughout the game against Gomez's pitching. Schulte slammed out three safe hits against the lath-like Yankee southpaw before he won the game in the eighth, quite fittingly, with his fourth consecutive single, a slam into left field that scored Ossie Bluege, who had opened the inning with a walk.

Playing for a single run in the light of Whitehill's superb hurling, Buddy Myer pushed Bluege along to second base with a sacrifice bunt, but all hands were safe when Rookie Jack Saltzgaver, in a moment of bad judgment, attempted to turn Myer's bunt into a force out at second to no avail. Manush sacrificed both runners along and then it was Manager McCarthy's turn to display some judgment which was questionable from the start and poor as it materialized.

Cronin Takes Walk.

With runners on second and third and only one out, McCarthy ordered Gomez to pass Cronin, who hadn't been able to get a ball out of the infield against Gomez, thus bringing up Schulte, who had accounted for exactly half of the Nats' six hits to that point.

Schulte banged the first pitch into left field, Chapman attempted to convert it into a shoe-string catch, but couldn't, and Bluege scored from third with the winning run. That Gomez later struck out Kuhel and Stone didn't matter.

Whitehill was breaking his fast curve over the corners of the plate from the outset and, except for issuing a few desultory walks in the first six innings, he was in no danger until the seventh, when, with one out, he evinced that he was tiring rapidly by filling the bases on passes to Ruth, Gehrig and Chapman. But he got himself off the spot when Lazzeri flied to Stone and when Schulte turned Dickey's line drive into a put-out.

Heinie Manush preserved Whitehill's chances for a no-hit contest back in the sixth when he made a standing-sitting-standing catch of Gomez's liner into left, and in the fourth, Johnny Stone had brought down Ruth's line drive with one hand with his back to the wall, but aside from these two balls, the Yanks couldn't claim the slightest semblance of a hit until Chapman intruded himself on the proceedings with one out in the ninth.

Whitehill Is Cheered.

When he came to bat during the Washington half of the ninth, Whitehill was the recipient of the unbridled cheers of the entire 70,000 who were waiting with bated breath his attempted completion of a no-hit game. As early as the sixth inning, after he had turned back the Yanks hitless, the tremendous throng had begun to scent a no-hit feat and every Yankee put-out was greeted with scattered cheers among the more noble-minded of the vast assemblage.

Washington pitching all but throttled the Yankee attack in that second game also, but one wild inning, the first, cost Walter Stewart an impressive performance. The Yankees scored four runs off two hits and three walks to take a commanding lead off Stewart at the start of the second game.

Stewart then proceeded to turn back the Yanks for the next five innings with only one hit, a single by Lazzeri that came to naught in the sixth, and when Al Crowder relieved him, the Nats had two runs of the four back, scoring the pair off young Johnny Murphy in the fourth inning.

All told, the Yanks made only five hits in that second game, which give them the unimpressive total of six for the double-header, but they got to Russell in the eleventh inning of that second game after Burley Burleigh Grimes, who last week offered his services to the Nats, had pitched the Yanks through perilous situations from the eighth through the eleventh.

Russell Goes to Hill.

Russell had relieved Crowder in the eleventh, a change necessitated by a pinch-hitter, and Jack Saltzgaver made the Yanks' fourth hit of the game, a single into left to start the inning. Byrd bunted him to second, Philips' protest of interference falling on the deaf ears of Umpire Dinneen. Russell was ordered to pass Gehrig and then he dug his own pitfall by hitting Chapman on the shirt to fill the bases.

With the winning run on third and only one out, Cronin called in his outfielders on the theory that a long fly would end the game anyway, and Lazzeri did end it successfully for the Yanks by hitting a ball into deep left field that Heinie Manush took one look at and then dashed for the dugout.

That wild inning by Stewart cost the Nats the ball game.

42,000 Crowd Sees Giants Win Pair

Dodgers Bow, 5-2 and 8-6, Before Largest Home Turnout in History.

BROOKLYN, May 30 (AP).—Before the largest crowd that ever witnessed a ball game in Ebbets Field, the New York Giants today won both ends of a holiday double-header from the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Forty-two thousand fans watched Southpaw Watson Clark go the full route this season to give the Giants a 5-to-2 victory in the first game against Van Lingle Mungo, the Dodgers' mound ace, whose four-game winning streak was abruptly terminated. The Giants hit four Brooklyn pitchers hard to take the nightcap, 8 to 6.

Lopez Plays Second.

Jimmy Bucher, the Dodgers' young second sacker, sprained his ankle in the first game and Al Lopez was drafted from behind the plate to play in Bucher's place. In the second game, when the use of pinch hitters left Manager Casey Stengel without a catcher, Lopez returned to his regular post and Joe Stripp, who fractured his ankle a month ago, hobbled around the infield for an inning.

Cummings Wins Auto Classic In Record Time; Rose Second

by about a mile, with Lou Moore, of Los Angeles, finishing third, 7½ miles behind the winner. Driving every inch of the way without relief, Cummings piloted his 4-cylinder little racer, painted a light cream color with a big yellow No. 7 on the rear and engine hood, over the perilous 500 miles in 4:46:05.21, to average 104.865 miles an hour, breaking the record of 104.162 miles an hour hung up by Louis Meyer, of South Gate, Calif., in winning the 1933 race.

Won About $40,000.

By his victory, Cummings, who has been driving racing cars for eight years, earned about $40,000, $20,000 of which he received as first prize for today's triumph. He won $1,525 in lap prizes; that is, sums of $50 to $100 for each lap he led the field.

Perhaps the most gratifying record breaking to speedway officials was the fact that today's bloodless race resulted in no deaths or serious injuries, although there were three smashups, all of them of a minor character. The most serious injury was sustained by George Bailey, of Detroit, who received a broken wrist when his car went over the wall after traveling 30 miles. The car hit the retaining wall on the north end of the track, bounced to the top and then dropped to the ground, but Bailey and his mechanic miraculously escaped death or serious injury.

When Cummings, his face wreathed in smiles, hammered his car across the finish line to the salute of cheers breaking in his ears, he proclaimed himself the happiest man in the world.

"I always wanted to win this Indianapolis race and today my ambition has been achieved," he said.

Mother Greets Winner.

The first person to greet him as a winner was his mother, who kissed him tenderly and told him how happy she was.

Between the crush of reporters and photographers, Cummings was finally pushed into the garage area and a shout went up "Here's your wife." The pushing stopped and the attractive Mrs. Cummings kissed her victorious husband and helped him push his car into the garage. So heavy was the crush at the garage that National Guardsmen were called to keep the crowd out.

Cummings, after stretching himself, first requested a cigarette and then a big bottle of beer. He reached for the beer before he said a word.

With a scorching sun beating down on the track, 33 machines were sent away to a perfect start promptly at 10 o'clock, but one by one they failed to survive the punishing test until 20 of them had dropped out, either because of minor accidents or motor trouble. Only 13 finished. Among the early victims of motor trouble was Louis Myer, of South Gate, Calif., who had previously won the race in 1928 and 1933. He had hoped for victory today, but was forced to surrender after traveling 240 miles, due to trouble with his oil line.

Race Nip and Tuck.

The race, almost from the start, was a nip-and-tuck affair with Frank Brisko, of Milwaukee, first leading and Rose coming up and finally Cummings taking complete command at 450 miles, never to lose the lead. At no time in the race was Rose worse than third. His defeat was heart-breaking, because he had assumed the lead at 250 miles and held it until the 300 mile mark had been passed, when Cummings overtook him.

Leon Durey, Los Angeles, owner of the car Rose drove, lodged official protest with race officials tonight, claiming that Cummings, in violation of the rules, had gained about three-fourths of a lap during the period when the drivers had been commanded to slow down while wrecked automobiles were removed from the course. The protest will be acted on tomorrow.

The three drivers whose cars were wrecked in smashes in making the dangerous curves were Chet Miller, of Detroit, George (Doc) McKenzie, of Edington, Pa., and Bailey. Luckily all escaped injury but Bailey, whose broken wrist was his only damage.

Finish Was Closest.

In the 22 years' history of the race, today's finish was the closest of all. Cummings and Rose were in a hub-to-hub thriller as they flashed across the 450-mile mark, with less than 100 yards separating them as they sped up the average to a new track record of 105.021 miles per hour.

Ralph Hepburn tearing along in third place, was forced to drop out because of a broken connecting rod and Moore moved into third place, two laps behind Cummings and Rose, William (Deacon) Litz, of DuBois, Pa., was fourth, trailing about 15 miles back, and Joe Russo, of Kenosha, Wis., in sixth place, was 20 miles back of the flying leaders. The others were strung out miles back, with the one surviving oil burner, piloted by William (Stubby) Stubblefield, of Los Angeles, gamely struggling along to the finish.

As Rose and Cummings swung into the last 25 miles, the immense crowd jumped to its feet and cut loose with a throaty cheer before the ultimate crowning of a new speed champion. Cummings was steadily increasing his lead with Rose in desperate pursuit. The spectators sensed that Cummings was the winner in the last lap of the race and gave him a mighty cheer as he sped on to victory.

Fleming's .565 Mark Tops Interstate League

Cumberland, Md., May 30 (Spl.). Latest averages of the Inter-State Baseball League show Austin "Rattle" Fleming, Potomac Edison outfielder, as the official leader in batting with a percentage of .565 in 23 trips to the plate while Jim Stevenson, big right-hander from Carlos, who is also a member of the Potomac Edison nine, heads the twirlers of the eight-club circuit with a record of three victories and no defeats.

Fleming has rapped out 13 hits in 23 trips to the plate and among his blows are three doubles, a triple and a home run. Sam Rainey, P. E. catcher, is the runner-up in batting with a percentage of .500.

Indians Divide Pair With Chisox

Lose in 12th, 8-7; Win, 5-4; Trosky Hits Three Homers in Nightcap.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 30 (AP). The Cleveland Indians worked for 21 innings in a double-header today to increase their lead at the head of the American League, but the best they could do was to split two games with the Chicago White Sox, losing the first, 8 to 7, in the twelfth, and winning the second, 5 to 4.

It was the towering Hal Trosky, Indian first baseman, who put on the big show for the day. In three times at bat in the second game, Trosky lifted the ball over the right-field wall for three home runs, almost winning the game single-handed.

Hale's Homers in Vain.

In the first game, Hale, Indian second baseman, connected for two home runs, one in the fourth and one in the sixth, but they didn't come when they were needed.

By splitting the double-header today the Indians lost an opportunity to tighten their half-game hold on first place, as the Yankees won and lost.

15,000 Jam Charles Town Track, See Gloritone Win Feature in 3-Nose Finish

Manager Bill Second in Feature

District - Owned Horse Gets Up to Win in His Final Stride.

Record Crowd Bets Sum of $114,298 on 8-Race Program.

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Correspondent).

CHARLES TOWN, West Va., May 30.—A crowd beyond the most optimistic dreams of the promoters of this race track crowded every nook and corner of the establishment this afternoon for a holiday at the races. While official figures were not available, the gathering was variously estimated up to 15,000 with that figure probably nearer right than any other. And their was betting, too. The mutuels were fairly bombarded with wagering throughout the afternoon and the final check-up showed that $114,298 passed through the machines.

Perhaps half of the 15,000 present were from Washington and they stayed to see an all-District victory in the Decoration Day handicap, the feature race. Not only did the Capital-owned Gloritone, the property of Martin Fynn, win the six and a haf furlong contest but Eddie Smith, a Washington boy, had the mount.

Second Straight Win.

It was the second straight victory for Gloritone and her second by a close margin. In fact, the race marked the second time that Gloritone figured in a three-nose finish at this mountain race track.

As on opening day, Gloritone came from far back in the field to nip the leader, which, for the second time, proved to be Manager Bill. There he was, always a bridesmaid and never a bride—at least, never here. The other nose figuring in the thrilling battle to the wire was that of Bonsoir, which for some reason had been installed the favorite.

It was a great race, run before an enthusiastic gathering, a high percentage of which caught only peeps of the struggle, so densely packed were the stands, lawn and clubhous.

The daily double drew the largest play in the short history of the course, and those who had the coveted tickets on the combination of Clear Knight and Silver Arch went down under the stands to collect a rather flattering sum of $277 for each $2 they had invested a few minutes before.

Reds Lose Holiday Twin Bill to Cards

Bow, 9-6 and 9-2, as St. Louis Team Hits Ball Hard.

Cincinnati, May 30 (AP).—Battering Red pitchers unfeelingly, and taking every advantage of bad fielding by the opposition, the St. Louis Cardinals took a holiday double-header from the Cincinnati Reds, 9 to 6 and 9 to 2.

Delancey provided the fireworks of the first contest, banging two singles, a triple and a home run.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CLEAR KNIGHT, $10.60, $3.80, $2.80. THIS PLAY, $3.00, $2.40. NOAJOYCE, $3.40.

CLEAR KNIGHT, away forwardly, raced a lap on NOAJOYCE until entering the stretch, wore the leader down in the drive and kept going to stall off THIS PLAY. Latter, tired off the pacemaker, moved up gradually on the back stretch, came through on the inside and was wearing the winner down. NOAJOYCE had been early speed to set the pace, but weakened badly.

SECOND RACE—Six and a half furlongs. Purse, $300. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:23. Off at 3:28. Winner, Mrs. L. Bull's br. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TULYRIES WAND, $5.20, $4.00, $2.80; TRUE JOHN, $11.40, $5.80; ZEBRA, $2.80.

TULYRIES WAND, away forwardly, assumed a short lead on the back stretch, was put to punishment entering the stretch and had enough left to hold TRUE JOHN safe. Latter, a forward factor at all times, could not get to the winner. ZEBRA raced forwardly throughout.

THIRD RACE—Six and a half furlongs. Purse, $300. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:50. Off at 4:00. Winner, B. McVey's br. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SILVER ARCH, $34.40, $14.00, $6.60; GOLDEN CASTLE, $9.00, $4.40; UNFAIR, $3.40.

SILVER ARCH, reserved off the early pace, moved up stoutly on the outside when leaving the back stretch, wore GOLDEN CASTLE down in the drive and just got up. GOLDEN CASTLE had good speed in setting the pace and, saving ground, just failed to last. UNFAIR, a forward factor at all times, hung on well.

FOURTH RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $300. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:40. Off at 4:50. Winner, Mrs. H. Smith's b. f. (4), by The Wanderer—Axiliade. Trained by H. L. Smith. Value to winner, $200; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:24, 0:33 3-5, 0:48, 1:01 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ADA WAN, $3.20, $2.80, $2.80; VERITAS, $9.20, $5.30; CANTER CHORD, $10.60.

ADA WAN outbroke her field from the inner rail, assumed a comfortable lead entering the back stretch, was given a breathing spell in the middle running and successfully withstood pressure from VERITAS in the final furlong under vigorous urging. The latter, away a step slow, pressed the leader through the final half mile and had no excuses. CANTER CHORD, a forward factor in the early running, but was tiring under pressure at the end. FAIR JACK, fractious at the post and placed outside the gates, was hard urged all the way. He pulled up lame. RUSTIC CUBA broke alusgishly and lacked speed throughout.

FIFTH RACE—Six and a half furlongs. Purse, $500. Decoration Day Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:21. Off at 5:25. Winner, M. Finn's b. f. (4), by The Porter—Slow and Easy. Trained by T. J. Donohue. Value to winner, $325; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:33 4-5, 0:47 3-5, 1:21.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GLORITONE, $7.60, $5.00, $3.60; MANAGER BILL, $5.00, $3.40; BON SOIR, $2.80.

GLORITONE, taken back off the pace in the early running, moved up when leaving the back stretch, circled the leaders on the final bend and, driving upon the outside, was up in the final stride. MANAGER BILL, reserved in the early running, moved up stoutly when called upon, took a very narrow lead in the stretch drive and just failed to last. BON SOIR, close to the leader at all times, hung on well. GOLDEN VEIN, a forward factor in the early running, could not match the speed of the first three. TODY WEST had good early speed, but stopped.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $300. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good from gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 5:56. Winner, A. R. Utterback's b. f. (3), by Archaic—Silver Song. Trained by A. H. Utterback. Value to winner, $200; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:49, 1:14 4-5, 1:42 2-5, 1:48 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JUSTA TEACHER, $41.00, $13.40, $8.60; CANTROUCH, $5.60, $4.40; DONA DULCIN, $6.20.

JUSTA TEACHER, away forwardly and having good speed, was placed under restraint when in the lead, raced thereafrom out the entire race and had speed in reserve at the finish. CANTROUD, slow as usual to find his speed, moved up stoutly on the inside when entering the stretch, made a futile bid for leadership, but could not carry DONA DULOIN from forwardly throughout and closed well. REPEAL, well up at all times, was tiring at the finish. LAWLESS LADY raced in spots. ASKE had good speed, but was taken back sharply and miserably ridden.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $300. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Trained by H. Schaefer. Winner, H. Schaefer's b. f. (4), by Wildair—Bottom Dome. Value to winner, $200; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:50, 1:15, 1:42, 1:49.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MONEY WILD, $9.60, $4.00, $3.60; ANGRY LASS, $3.80, $3.60; LIGHT ACTION, $6.60.

MONEY WILD, away well, raced FLYING START into submission in the first half mile, shook off STEELTON with ease on the back stretch and drew out to win as her rider pleased. ANGRY LASS, slow to find her best speed, closed well, but was no match for the winner. LIGHT ACTION, under stout restraint and taken back on the back stretch, but tired from his efforts. FLYING START had some early speed, but could not keep up. TULYRIES SPOT lacked speed and was never a contender.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $300. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 6:59. Off at 7:05. Winner, J. Arthur's b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOKIE B., $8.20, $4.80, $3.20; CHANGEABLE, $8.60, $5.20; McDONALD H., $2.80.

BOKIE B., started off the early pace moved up stoutly when called on, wore down WAR GENERAL on the last turn, but had to be fully extended to the finish. CHANGEABLE, always a forward contender, hung well. McDONALD H., slow to find his best speed, closed well. LENOX AVENUE, sluggish in the early racing, closed some ground. WAR GENERAL had some speed, but flattened out badly.

Gene Venzke Breaks U. S. 1,500-Meter Record in District A. A. U. Meet Feature

Nine District Marks Are Lowered

Venzke Wins Special by 50 Yards; Williamson in Second Place.

Wydmyer, Guckeyson Star as Maryland U. Team Triumphs.

THE fame of Gene Venzke is well-deserved, to put it mildly, so far as some 2,000 persons from Washington and vicinity are concerned. A crowd of about that number wended its way to the third annual District A. A. U. championship meet at the University of Maryland's Byrd Stadium yesterday largely to get an eyeful of the vaunted Venzke in action and came away satisfied that the great Penn middle-distancer is really great.

In the feature event of an afternoon's program which saw nine District records soved into oblivion, the tall, lanky lad with the machine-like stride led a crack field home by 50 yards in a special 1,500-meter invitation run in one-tenth of a second under the American record of 3.53.3 held by Glen Cuningham. Venzke's amazing performance was especially remarkable in view of the lack of a competitor able to press him at any time.

Old Liners Win Meet.

Maryland athletes dominated the meet from a team angle, the varsity team rolling up 62½ points for first place and the freshmen 26 for second. Catholic University, champion for the past two years, finished third with 19.

Pushing the Penn star for individual honors were the Maryland sprint flash, and strong-armed Bill Guckeyson, of the Old Line freshmen. Widmyer took another step toward National recognition by stepping the 100 meters in 10 4-5 seconds, and the 200 meters in 21 4-5 without the help of especialy able competition. Both were new A. A. U. records by wide margins.

Guckeyson bettered the District records for the discus and javelin throws, hurling the former 132 feet 1¾ inches, and the spear 179 feet 1 inch. The discus throw improved the old mark by more than 6 feet, while the javelin record was moved up nearly a dozen. Guckeyson also placed second in the shot put.

Headley Sets Record.

Coleman Headley, of the Maryland Freshmen, traveled the 800-meter distance in 1:58 4-5 for a new record; Wilmer Bradley, of Georgetown, eclipsed the old 200-meter low hurdle mark of 25 1-5 seconds by 2-5 of a second; Herbert Bryant, of the Washington Track and Field Club, wrote a new standard in the books for the shot-put with a heave of 46 feet 1 inch, and Willard Beers, of Maryland, took the broad jump with a record-breaking leap of 22 feet 4½ inches.

Some idea of Venzke's speed can be gleaned from a glance at the figures for his quarters. Taking the lead from Johnnie Follows, former 2-mile champion, before the first turn, Venzke opened up at a pace approaching quarter-mile speed, streaking the first lap in 60 2-5 seconds. The watch showed 2:03 2-5 for the half, but it was not until the last lap that the former machine-shop apprentice really opened up.

Meanwhile, Follows, Red Lewis, former Duke miler, and Harry Williamson, Southern Conference half-mile champion, were battling it out for the runner-up position. Williamson broke into a sprint over the last 25 yards to take second place by inches from Follows.

Team Quits Field.

Refusing to abide by the umpire's decision on a play at home plate, the Cabin John players walked off the field in the fifth inning of their game with the White Haven team. White Haven was leading at the time by a 3-2 margin. It was not a league contest.

Real Mat Test Tonight for Browning

McMillan Threatens Big Upset in Feature at Griffith Stadium.

JARRING JIM M'MILLAN, who was good enough to stay with Title-claimant Jim Browning an hour and 26 minutes the last time this pair tangled on the rassle mat, gets another chance at Griffith Stadium tonight and he is making dire threats that this time it will be Browning who bites the dust.

According to a broadcast McMillan has made to some District friends, he could have thrown Browning the last time they met had he used his head for thinking as well as for flying tackling. Jim declares that he had Browning close to out on several occasions but was too cautious. Tonight, he avers, it will be different, and when he gets Browning in a bad way he plans to dive in and finish him.

This Browning lad, however, is hard to get in "a bad way," and Jim probably will find it out. It must be admitted, though, that the former Illinois football star is a first-flighter in the mat profession, too, and a dog-eat-dog battle is in the offing no matter which cops the decision.

Lutze-Ledoux Promising.

With Dick Raines likely to be able to give Everett Marshall little more than workout in the scheduled semifinal, indications are that the Nick Lutze-Jean Ledoux grapple will more closely rival the headliner in the estimation of the cash customers. Lutze was the last man to throw Browning before he won his title claim in a series with Strangler Lewis. He is good and Ledoux, a rough and tough customer, has class enough to force him to travel at full speed if he expects to win.

Harry Fields, who has been unbeaten here, meets a Tartar in Earl McCready in another preliminary while Jack McArthur and Ernie Zellers meet in the curtain-raiser.

Tickets purchased for last week's rained-out show are good for tonight.

40,000 Watch Cubs Defeat Bucs Twice

Pirates Beaten 7-2 and 5-4, With Second Going to 11th Inning.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 30 (AP).—The Cubs returned from their disastrous road trip to treat an overflow crowd of 40,000 fans to a doubleheader victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates today, taking the second game, 5 to 4, in 11 innings after capturing the opener, 7 to 2, in regulation time.

Chuck Klein's thirteenth home run and Gabby Hartnett's ninth, aided Lon Warneke in turning in his season's sixth victory in the opener.

Hectic Extra Innings.

Larry French, fourth Pittsburgh pitcher, and Charley Root, third Cub hurler, battled through four tense inings in which each repeatedly worked himself out of jams before the former yielded in the second game.

The Cubs played with a revamped infield, English playing second base for the first time in his career.

Heurichs Bow, 2 to 0, To Front Royal Stars

Front Royal, Va., May 30 (Spl.).—The Front Royal All-Stars defeated the Heurich Brewers of Washington, D. C., here this afternoon by the score of 2-0.

Boerner and Lyons waged a tight pitcher's battle, each allowing only five hits but the Stars managed to bunch two with a walk to score in the first inning, adding their final tally on Simpson's fourth inning homer.

Lacy McFall was the only man on either team to get more than one hit. Nesbitt and Lyle McFall made feature plays afield. The game required only 1 hour and 25 minutes.

Broken Glass Horse Show Winner

13-Year-Old Is Star of Fredericksburg, Wins 2 Blue Ribbons.

FREDERICKSBURG, Va., May 30 (Spl.).—Broken Glass, formerly a consistent winner in the Virginia circuit, a former champion, came back from retirement to win two blue ribbons in two contests and make a strong bid for the championship of the Fredericksburg horse show, to be awarded tomorrow.

Broken Glass, the 13-year-old champion, for years a consistent winner in Virginia, Maryland capital shows, made a great comeback to bring more trophies to the Middleburg stables of Mrs. D. N. Lee. His performances in the model hunter and middle and heavyweight classes were flawless, and the veteran is favored by old-time turf followers to shine in the ladies' hunters and Corinthian classes tomorrow to win the show championship.

Other ribbon winners cheered by the holiday crowd of several thousand who came from all over northern Virginia to see Fredericksburg's first event recognized by the Virginia horse show circuit included Manly W. Carter's hunter champion, Sir Cona, victor in the green hunter class and second-place winner in the hunter and model hunter classes; L. R. Colbert's Skyrocket, local hunter trophy winner, and Manly W. Carter's Croton, who took a first and third place in the hunter and model hunter classes.

Those judging the winners were Waugh Glasscock, master of Prince William hounds, of Upperville, Va.; Clyde Bailey, The Plains, Va.; Jack Carpenter, of Greenwood, Va., and Charles S. Hurkamp, of Fredericksburg. Thirteen more classes will be run off tomorrow to complete the two-day show.

Macks and Red Sox Split in Double-Header

Philadelphia, May 30 (AP).—The Athletics and Boston Red Sox divided the holiday bill today, the Mackmen winning the morning game, 5 to 3, to break their losing streak of four straight, and then dropping the afternoon affair 2 to 1 behind Dusty Rhodes' five-hit pitching.

Rhodes, opposed by Joe Cascarella, in the hard-fought second game, blanked the Athletics after Rabbit Warstler led off in the first inning with a home run. Boston won out in the sixth when Morgan banged a two-bagger that scored Werber.

D. C. Bankers Elect Siddons As Parley Ends

3 Advanced by Session at White Sulphur Springs; New Chief Speaks.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

White Sulphur Springs, Va., May 30.—As is customary, three officers of the District of Columbia Bankers Association advanced a position in the annual election held at the closing session of its convention here today.

Frederick P. H. Siddons, secretary, American Security & Trust Co., was elected president, succeeding George O. Vass, vice president and cashier, Riggs National Bank.

Charles H. Doeing, a vice president of Washington Loan & Trust Co., was elected first vice president; Karl W. Corby, partner, W. B. Hibbs & Co., second vice president; Thomas J. Groom, vice president and cashier, Bank of Commerce & Savings, secretary; Albert S. Gatley, executive vice president, Lincoln National Bank, was elected treasurer for a twenty-fourth consecutive term.

Council of Administration.

Elections to the association's council of administration were Archibald McLachlen, secretary, McLachlen Banking Corporation; Clarence F. Burton, president, City Bank of Washington; Wilmer J. Waller, vice president and cashier, Hamilton National Bank; Frank Stason, a vice president of National Savings and Trust Co. Past President Vass becomes a member a of the council and H. H. McKee, president, National Capital Bank, is its other member.

Mr. McKee was reelected member of the executive council of the American Bankers Association.

Mr. Vass was named local vice president for the National Group, succeeding C. H. Pope, vice president and treasurer Munsey Trust Co. Mr. McKee, was named member of the National association's nominating committee, and Mr. Waller, alternate member.

National Body Officers.

Local vice presidents for the four banking divisions of the National body were named as follows: National Banks, Robert H. Lacey, cashier, Columbia National Bank; Savings Banks, Fred McKee, vice president, Security Savings and Commercial Bank; State Banks, Mr. McLachlen; Trust Companies, O. R. D. Preston, president, Union Trust Co.

Resolutions that association members lend support and encouragement to the Government's home modernization and renovation program and take a sympathetic and cooperative attitude toward its efforts to improve housing conditions and methods of mortgage financing, were adopted.

Passage by Congress of legislation extending term of the temporary bank deposit insurance fund until July 1, 1935, also was urged. This is so that sufficient time may be afforded for study of the plan in actual practice as a guide or setting up whatever permanent measures may be desirable.

President-Elect Speaks.

The last day's address was given by President-elect Siddons on the effects of the banking act of 1933. In it, he reviewed the effects of the act upon credit, management of banks, personnel, public attitude and miscellaneous bank policies.

As to credit, he said, unquestionably the framers of the act realized that its control must lay in the hands of the Federal Government through the Treasury Department and the Federal Reserve Board, its agent. Due to the desire and really the mandates of, the people that banking must remain abnormally liquid, he reminded, the banker has not been able to participate in long-term loans as in the past, but has sought to find short-term loans, which, unfortunately, have not existed in large numbers.

General conclusion, he said, as to how the banking act has effected credit would indicate that it has not disturbed many old practices as yet and that time alone can tell. When there comes a call to apply the brakes on speculative credit or when we reach a critical stage in deposit insurance assessments or when money is tight, will this act be given the acid test as to credit, he predicted.

Effects of Law.

Discussing the effect of the law on public attitude, he said that through the terms of the act relating to the federal deposit insurance, both temporary and permanent, it has meant a return of public confidence in banking. The increase in deposits, he cited, is concrete evidence of that confidence, he further expressed belief that there has been built up such strong public demand for guaranteed deposits that while the law may be tempered the public attitude will force it to be permanent.

The public who has owned bank stocks, he has found, however, is not satisfied with the clause that allows new bank stock to be issued without the double liability clause. The old stockholders believe they have not been treated fairly and that all stock should be on the same footing.

The changing of an old contract is not regarded as constitutional and Congress refused to change this. Another public attitude still apparent has been as to whether the law is stringent enough to keep the banker under complete control.

Banking Act Praised.

Mr. Siddons said that in the preparation of his talk, he was glad to hear from different sources that the banker believes and this is nearly unanimous that the banking act of 1933 has shown itself to be a good law.

"It looks to me," he concluded, "that the banker in one year has been given back his bank but with some good restrictions. But let us remember that in the long run, the world is governed more by opinion than by laws. It is the chief wall of defense around property and life.

"We have been given again the chance to make public opinion our guiding force. Let us not lose this opportunity to prove that the banking business should again have its high place in the eyes of the public. Our future is certainly far brighter than it has been for five years. Let us prove that we are fitted for the task."

Annual Reports Presented.

At the closing business session, annual reports for the following committees were presented: Auditing, by Barnum L. Colton, real estate officer, National Savings & Trust Co.; standardized banking forms, by Irving Zirpel, Union Trust Co.; insurance, Mr. McLachlen; credit bureau, H. F. Stokes, National Metropolitan Bank; protective, Mr. Groom; treasury relations, Hilleary G. Hoskinson, a vice president of Riggs National Bank; advertising, Eliot H. Thompson, publicity director Washington Loan & Trust Co.; law and legislation, by Francis G. Addison, jr., president Security Savings & Commercial Bank; publicity, Mr. Corby.

Mr. Vass, the retiring president, was presented with a gold watch by the association.

Power Production Rises During Week

New York, May 30 (AP).—Production of electricity by the electric light and power industry last week totaled 1,654,903,000 kilowatt hours, compared with 1,649,770,000 kilowatt hours the previous week, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

The increase over a year ago was 10.8 per cent, against an increase of 11.2 per cent the previous week.

Regional gains from 1933 for last week were:

New England, 5.4 per cent, against a rise of 8.5 per cent the week before; Middle Atlantic, 9.1 per cent, against 8.6; Central industrial, 13.4, against 14.6; West Central, 11.3, against 8.8; Southern States, 5.8, against 5.0; Rocky Mountain, 24, against 21.8; Pacific Coast, 15, against 16.5.

Spot Cotton Is Steady at New Orleans

New Orleans, May 30 (AP).—Spot cotton closed steady, two points down. Sales 319; low middling 10.85; middling 11.50; good middling 11.85; receipts 933; stock 655,805.

The market continued to rule quiet after midsession and prices eased off slightly, July dropping to 11.40 and October to 11.59, new lows for the day and 3 to 5 points under the highs of the morning.

The market rallied 1 point at the end and closed quiet and steady, showing net declines for the day of 1 to 3 points.

The cotton market was very dull today owing to the fact that the markets elsewhere were closed for Memorial Day.

As a result, orders for buying and selling were few and far between. Liverpool cables came in about as due and prices here opened irregularly, 3 points up to one down, with July at 11.45, October at 11.62, and December 11.76.

The market eased off slightly as the morning progressed and near midsession July traded at 11.41, October at 11.61, and December at 11.73, down 1 to 4 points from the early highs and 1 to 2 points under yesterday's close.

The weather map was not posted nor was the weekly weather and crop report issued today, owing to the holiday.

After midsession the market continued quiet and unchanged. Exports for the day totaled 12,657 bales.

Stock Trading May Be Light During Week

By Max Buckingham.
(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

New York, May 30 (U.P.).—Stock market observers were in cross currents tonight.

From the standpoint of volume, the outlook was not cheerful.

From the standpoint of trade news there were favorable signs.

There was no apparent reason to believe volume will pick up to any appreciable extent tomorrow or the remainder of this week. Many brokers and traders will not return to the street from the Memorial Day holiday until Monday. Volume Tuesday was at a ten-year low level. The month-end approaches.

But on the industrial side there were some signs which gave little encouragement to Wall street. These included:

Car loadings show about seasonal rise.

Extra dividends by several companies.

Retail trade pick-up in the New York district in early May.

Excellent sales of electric refrigerators.

Probably majority opinion Wall street as regards possibility of profit is bullish, although the market continues to operate in a manner dangerous to the public.

But this feel did not generate to the army of workers in the street, for Friday is the first of June and jobs and salaries are in a nervous position at this month-end. One estimate today was that the month's trading volume, with tomorrow considered, would be about 26,000,000 shares, the lowest since March of 1933. That means red ink for brokerage houses and red ink means loss of jobs and pay roll reductions wherever they can be made. One house reportedly has asked permission to scale down salaries under the $35 minimum code requirement.

Daily Oil Yield Is Decreased 21,550 Barrels

Week's Production Cut to 2,492,500 Units as Imports Fall.

New York, May 30 (AP).—Daily average gross crude oil production in the United States decreased 21,550 barrels in the week ended May 26, totaling 2,492,500 barrels, the American Petroleum Institute's weekly summary indicates. Daily average production east of California decreased 6,350 barrels to 2,013,300 barrels.

Refineries representing 89.7 per cent of estimated total capacity, operated at 71.3 per cent of their capacity, reported daily average runs of crude oil to stills as 2,405,000 barrels. Daily average the previous week for refineries representing 89.7 per cent of total, operated at 72.0 per cent of capacity, was 2,430,000 barrels.

Finished gasoline stocks at refineries totaled 35,987,000 barrels against 35,705,000.

Unfinished gasoline stocks totaled 7,377,000 barrels against 7,913,000 barrels.

Wheat Futures Close Lower At Winnipeg

Winnipeg, May 30 (AP).—Futures prices underwent sharp setbacks on the grain exchange today, tumbling before heavy realizing sales from longs frightened by overnight rains in Alberta and forecast of unsettled weather for the prairies. Closing figures were off 2½@2¾ cents net.

The finish was ½@¾ cent over the day's low points, with May wheat at 76, July 77@77¼ and October at 79@79⅛ cents.

Export business was thin following the large sales of Tuesday, which today were raised from an estimate of 1,000,000 bushels to 2,000,000 bushels.

Trading over the session was not in great volume, although the market had its active moments. Entering the closing stages prices settled at levels about 2 cents down and hovered around that point.

Buying was mixed in character and, in comparison with the selling, was not very noteworthy. The bulk of offerings came in the nature of profit-taking, on the prospect of a break in the weather and showers in Alberta.

Dollar Wheat Is Reality on Many Markets

Opinion Divided Whether Farmer Will Win by Higher Prices.

Chicago, May 30 (U.P.).—Dollar wheat was a reality in many of the Nation's markets today, but so ravaging has been the 1934 drought that opinion was divided today whether the farmer will win or lose by higher prices offered for his product.

Each day of dry weather sees an estimated million bushels sheared off the likely production for this year, crop experts in the wheat belt say.

Estimate for the collective winter and spring crop has been set at an unofficial 600,000,000 bushels, 200,000,000 bushels below a normal yield and only about 100,000,000 bushels over last year, when a 30-year low was established.

14,000,000 Bushels Holdover.

Authorities declared the carryover of wheat July 1, when the crop year ends, will be 200,000,000 bushels. A holdover of 130,000,000 always is needed as protection against famine. This leaves 140,000,000 bushels as the actual holdover, which, added to the estimated yield, brings the aggregate up to 740,000,000 bushels, experts say.

Domestic consumption normally is around 650,000,000 bushels. This fact considered, the statisticians calculate, 1935 will find the country 40,000,000 bushels short of the necessary carry-over.

With wheat prices in American markets mounting because of the lack of sub-soil and surface moisture in fields already growing, today finds price levels here considerably higher than the world parity and some fears of importation have been voiced.

Values on the board of trade, for example, are around 40 cents a bushel higher than those in Buenos Aires. It has been pointed out, on the other hand, that the President recently was empowered to over night lift the import duty on wheat by 50 per cent. The duty at present is 42 cents a bushel. A 50 per cent advance would bring the duty to 63 cents, which, added to prices now asked in other countries, would put foreign markets too far out of line to compete.

No Immediate Danger.

Grain men said there was no immediate danger of it becoming necessary for the United States to import wheat.

R. O. Cromwell, crop expert for Lamson Bros. & Co., brokers, estimated that only production as low as 500,000,000 bushels would necessitate importation. This would mean, he pointed out, a winter wheat crop of 300,000,000 bushels and about 200,000,000 bushels of spring wheat, a total lower than any yield in half a century.

Seriousness of the dry weather situation, however, can not be overestimated, the grain men insist.

Drought worse than any man has seen in this country at this time of year has spread havoc throughout agricultural America. Last year the situation was much the same, although the dry weather came at another time. Crop production has been stemmed by the Government acreage reduction program, working a double hazard.

The situation in the corn and oats belt, although gaining alarming proportions, is not yet as serious as that of the principal grain. Recent rains have somewhat relieved the situation in this section, but normal rainfall is said to be the need of the remainder of the season if a profitable production can be expected.

While wheat prices have been skyrocketing to war-time levels, the intense drought has served to lower livestock prices. A scarcity of feed is forcing farmers to flood markets with cattle, hogs and sheep and officials at the stock yards throughout the country say that meat far beyond the current demand is being received. Values have declined accordingly.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Basic Point in Home-Building Plan Is Whether It Is to "Rescue" Business; If So, It Means Waste and Heavy Losses.

By Ralph West Robey.

Enough objections have been raised to the Administration's home building and renovation plan, it is said, that passage of the measure by this Congress is questionable unless there is intervention from the White House. In view of the great ado that was made about the plan at the time of its formal appearance on the scene this is a rather surprising situation. When one goes over the list of points to which witnesses have taken exception, however, it is easy to understand why there might be some hesitancy on the part of Congress to throw the Government into this undertaking. It has been berated on the grounds both of involving unsound principles of financing and of being defective in structure and administrative detail.

In spite of the imposing list of objections that has been offered by witnesses, nevertheless, there remains one of fundamental importance that, so far as I have seen, has not been mentioned. This is the question of the primary and immediate purpose of the plan. Is it designed and put forth at this time because of a desire to come to the aid of home builders and home owners? Or is it for the primary purpose of helping business, with only a secondary idea of helping the homeowner?

Proponents Would Deny Value of Such Questions.

Proponents of the scheme would reply to these questions, I suppose, by saying that such a distinction is impossible; that the plan will help business through creating a demand in the construction and other heavy industries, but that this demand will be a reflection of the betterment of living conditions in the country. They would maintain, in other words, that helping business and helping home owners and home builders go hand in hand, and that this is one of the strong points of the idea.

Such an answer begs the question. It may be granted that if the Government extends a billion dollars of loans to home owners for renovation that the living condition of these beneficiaries will be improved and that, through their spending of the billion dollars business will be helped, at least temporarily. Business, however, will be improved still more, temporarily, and living conditions bettered by an even greater extent if the Government makes loans amounting to $10,000,000,000. And still more, if the loans total $50,000,000,000.

In other words, the real question at issue is not whether the plan will help business and improve business conditions, but whether it will be conducted in a sound manner. If its purpose is to help business the important thing will be to pour out funds, and, consequently, losses will be heavy; if it is to help home owners the important thing will be to protect their economic welfare, and losses could be held low.

CWA Offers Good Example Of How Plan Could Work.

Those who think that worrying over such a point is needless should refresh their memories on the operation of the CWA. That was an organization that theoretically could have given us economical unemployment relief. This possibility, however, was lost in the attempt to "rescue" business and put an end to the growing wave of criticism throughout the country. The result was that the CWA became perhaps the most extravagant, wasteful and fantastic "relief" organization the world has ever seen.

If the home building and renovation plan is used primarily as a means of helping business there is, it seems to me, a grave danger that this record will be repeated. If it is, the consequence will be even worse than in the CWA. In the latter we merely threw away scores and scores of millions of dollars; in the case of the home building plan, not only would we be throwing away money, but at the same time we would be saddling homeowners with a debt that they could not carry, with the result that either foreclosures or repudiations would be the order of the day.

Freight Car Loadings

Chicago, May 30 (AP).—Freight traffic over the Southern Pacific hit a new peak for 1934 last week when the line loaded 23,095 cars, an increase of 3,632 over the corresponding week a year ago.

The Milwaukee road's freight loadings from May 1 to May 28 were 91,886 cars, as against 90,341 cars in 1933.

Loadings of the Rock Island lines for the week ended May 26 totaled 20,703 cars against 20,129 in the same week of 1933 and 10,474 in the preceding week of 1934.

St. Louis, May 30 (AP).—The Wabash Railway Co. announced that carloadings for the week ending May 26 totaled 12,796 cars, compared with 11,031 for the corresponding week of 1933.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Cheerfulness prevailed at the start of today's session on the stock exchange with German bonds notably firm on news that the Dawes and Young loans were excluded from the debt moratorium, but the market reacted later. Argentine rails were firmer on good support, while gilt-edged securities and gold-mining shares also improved. Other sections eased, and the market closed quiet.

Paris—Prices on the bourse reacted favorably to the government's fiscal reform measures. Rentes improved and gold-mining shares were strong. The closing was steady.

Berlin—The reserved comment regarding the outcome of the transfer conference weakened prices on the boerse, which registered slight losses. The declines, however, were balanced at the closing, which was sustained.

Silk Mills of Strasburg Select New Manager

Strasburg, Va., May 30 (Spl.).—Strasburg's silk mills, reopening next month through efforts of the citizens' committee, chamber of commerce and local banks, will be under the management of Samuel Burlinger, of New York. Burlinger is now supervising the installation of machinery in the two buildings and expects to begin operations early in June.

About a year ago the mills, under other ownership, were forced to close because of financial conditions.

Federal Bond Exchange Plan Is Expected

Bankers Now Speculate on Treasury Financing Lists for June 15.

By W. R. Huff.

New York, May 30 (AP).—The Government securities market looks for an announcement before the week is out regarding the Federal Treasury's financing plans for June 15, its next financing date.

Bankers expect the Treasury will make an exchange offering at that time for the called fourth 4¼ per cent Liberty Bonds, amounting to $1,200,000,000. These bonds were called on April 15 for redemption on October 15.

In addition, the Treasury has $175,000,000 of ¼ per cent certificates maturing on June 15 which must be redeemed or refinanced. The next maturity thereafter comes on August 1.

Outlook for Issues Changes.

The market has now changed its mind about the possibility of a huge issue of securities for the purpose of refinancing some of the near-maturities of short-term obligations and also to raise new funds for the Treasury in line with its recovery expenditure program.

The rate of expenditure for recovery purposes has been slower than anticipated and the Treasury still has about $1,200,000,000 on deposit with various banks. This seems to preclude the immediate need for selling more securities on which interest would have to be paid.

Since expenditures outside of the ordinary budget are now at the rate of only about $400,000,000 a month, compared with original expectations far in excess of that figure, cash still held at banks is enough to carry the Government's program along for several months.

Bond Conditions Favorable.

Conditions in the Government bond market are extremely favorable for any kind of financing, in the opinion of Wall street bankers.

Treasury notes maturing in from two to four years are selling at yield prices of 1 per cent to 2 per cent, while longer term Federal bonds are yielding less than 3 per cent except in the case of the higher coupon issues. The latter have not been as popular as the lower-coupon issues because of the high premiums at which they sell.

Despite the advantages to the Treasury's technical position of refunding part of the short-term debt, bankers believe that the market will continue favorable throughout the summer and that plenty of opportunities will be presented for this operation.

Mechanics of Market.

The mechanics of the market would be overtaxed, it is thought, if the Treasury attempted too much at once.

Excess reserves of Federal Reserve member banks remain in the neighborhood of $1,650,000,000. This huge backlog of funds will be sufficient for many months to come, it is said, to insure cheap borrowing conditions for the Government.

With the Treasury spending some of its profits gained through gold devaluation, the pressure of bank funds in search of investments is expected to increase in coming weeks.

A $1,000 BOND
(A True Story of Our Service)

The other day one of our patrons took his safe deposit box from our vault into one of the private booths provided for our customers. When he replaced the papers in his box he overlooked a $1,000 bond which had fallen on the floor. He returned the box to the vault—and this is where our service comes in.

A record is kept of each customer's visit to the vault and notation is made of the number of the private booth he or she uses. Immediately after the patron leaves the booth, and before it is used by another customer, the booth is carefully examined by our vault custodian. It was in this manner that the bond was discovered and promptly returned to the owner.

This is a regular feature of our service. Think what it might be worth to you!

Radio Waves and Ripples

"ON the radio and for dancing, quality can be and is forsaken for blatancy. Indeed, some people even enjoy 'hill billy' music . . ."

That has won J. Harry Phillips, jr., of 4412 New Hampshire avenue, a violin.

The story begins on a Saturday night several weeks ago when Enric Madriguera, leader of the Waldorf-Astoria Orchestra, was playing for a broadcast.

Madriguera twice ran through the chorus of a popular melody, once with a fiddle and once with a $30,000, 1714 Guarnerius, the gift of the immortal Caruso. Then he offered a violin to the listener who could distinguish between the instruments and who best told why.

With a fine disregard for the feelings of hill billies, Phillips combined discrimination, a facility shared by approximately half of Madriguera's correspondents. Phillips, in other words, knows a Guarnerius when he hears one.

A graduate of Eastern High School and a clerk in the District Engineering Department, Phillips studied violin assiduously for many years before losing interest, an interest which, he believes, will be revived by the violin the New York bandman has promised to send him.

IN one of the more widely read radio fan magazines, Fred Waring strikes out, feebly, at his imitators.

Asperity toward plagiarism is, of course, laudable, but we see no reason for calling your mimics "copy cats," unless you have discovered after many tries that the use of a term closely associated with certain derisive epithets and gestures only employed among male and female persons between the ages of 5 and 12 years, is a pretty effective way to shame them.

As such it may be good sport, but as a preventative, it is about as effective as saying "nasty" three times before sticking out your tongue.

By crying "copy cats," Waring, or the ghost writer who turned out the piece for him, probably unconsciously expressed a sense of futility that inevitably must result from a consideration of means of throttling them. And even if something could be done about imitators, we arise to suggest the advisability of doing nothing. We are reactionary. We believe that imitation is to entertainment what competition was to trade (before NRA), that it is the chief reason for new ideas, if any.

THE experience of the Warings demonstrates what every entertainer well knows, that the market for new ideas is definitely limited to, say, not more than two or three ideas at one time, with variations according to the temper of each performer. For years the Pennsylvanians lined them up at the theater box-offices before they found a sponsor who could see their radio value.

"Then," writes Fred, "came the copy cats . . . Recordings are made of our semiweekly broadcasts and arrangements copied, even to punctuation. Frog-voiced comics imitate our own inimitable Poley McClintock in novelty numbers that were taboo prior to our entry into the field."

We expect a new idea almost any week now.

From no less than 15 points, the networks will bring us the fleet review by land, water and air today.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Howler Tells Uncle Joe How It Happened.

Howler certainly did live up to his name on that Monday morning when Uncle Joe came home; for he outhowled any dog you ever heard, while Uncle Joe was going around to the porch, and he reared up on the lattice and scratched like he was going to tear it down.

"Shut up," said Uncle Joe, as he unlocked the door and let Howler out, "and tell me what has happened. When did Blackie Bear come here, and what all did he do?"

"It would take a long time to tell you what he did, but it wouldn't take long to tell what he didn't do. He did most everything. To begin with, he and two other bears jumped on me and nearly killed me. I fought them as long as I could, and then two of them caught me and brought me back here and locked me up.

"Then I don't know what all they did; but I could hear the sheep bleating and the chickens squalling and the geese quacking, for ever so long, and then I heard a gun shoot two or three times, and then I could see Blackie and the others filling baskets and bags and taking them away.

"It seemed to me they were here all night. Just look here where I fought them when they all jumped on me."

And Howler showed Uncle Joe that place where he and Hound Dog had rolled over and scratched and tore the dirt all up where Blackie had made lots of tracks.

Jay Bird was sitting up in the old walnut tree, laughing himself almost to death, while Howler went out to the barn and the garden and the peanut patch, and Uncle Joe kept getting madder and madder, as he saw how many of his things Blackie had taken.

Howler would limp along like he was so sore he could hardly walk, and after a while Uncle Joe came up to him and patted him on the head, and said, "Poor old doggie, I guess you did the best you could, but I know you couldn't whip a crowd of animals that could do all this devilment. Go on back to your bed and rest, and I'll bring you some dinner, after a while.

"Compliments of Blackie Bear," muttered Uncle Joe, as he saw that one of his bee gums was gone. I'll 'compliment' him, if I have to live a hundred years to do it," and he kept on going around and missing more and more of the good things for which Blackie had thanked him.

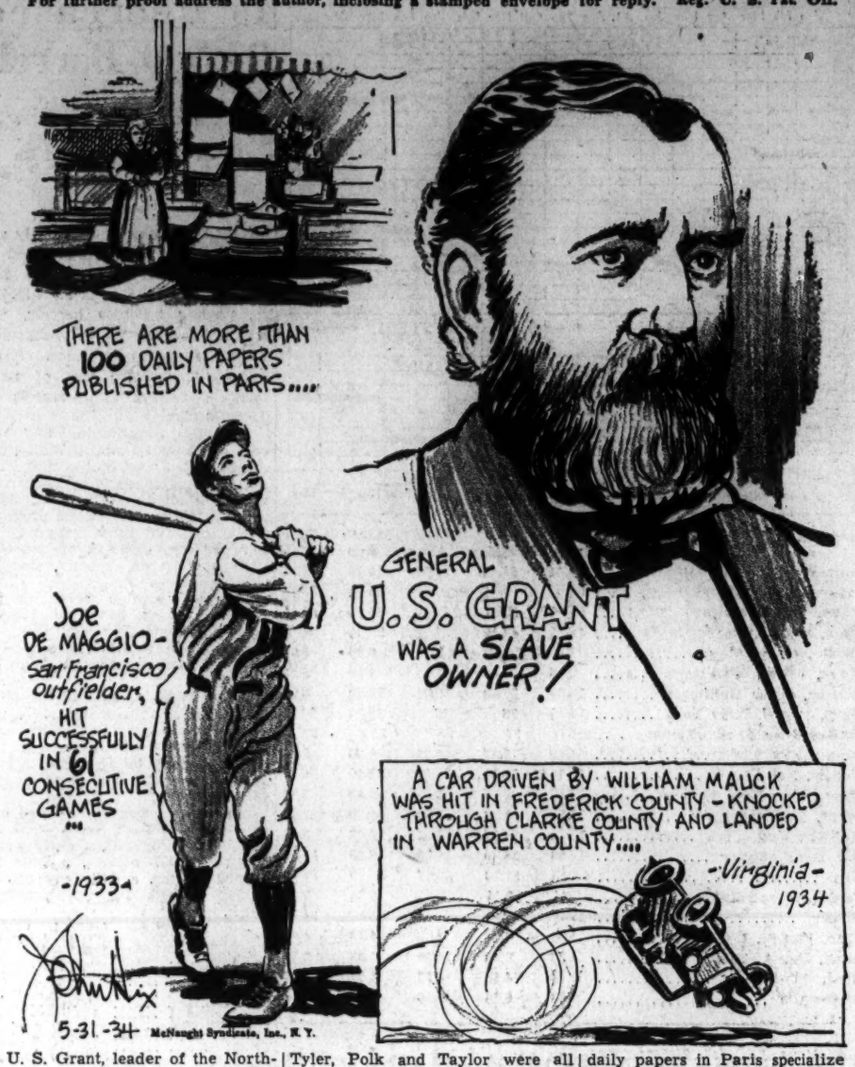
Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

For further proof address the author, inclosing a stamped envelope for reply. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.



U. S. Grant, leader of the Northern armies during the Civil War and later President of the United States after all the slaves were freed, was himself at one time a slave owner—at least, he owned half a slave or, rather, he and his wife together owned a slave boy. The boy was given to them as a wedding present.

Nine other men who became President were also slave owners, and most of them owned them while in office. Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Jackson, Tyler, Polk and Taylor were all slave owners in the full sense of the term, according to George W. Stimpson. Andrew Johnson, who succeeded Lincoln, owned a few slaves as personal servants, but never sold any of them. Nothing was thought of it in those days—for even Patrick Henry, the man who said "Give me liberty or give me death," was a slave owner.

A wide variety of political tastes, together with the fact that most daily papers in Paris specialize in one or another type of news, accounts for the large number of newspapers there. Where in this country your daily paper, the one which you are now reading, gives you complete coverage of the news, sports, drama, political news, editorial information and opinion, the Frenchman must read several papers to get all the news.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — What, No Arrests? — By Harry J. Tuthill

YES GENTLEMEN, I AM MONTGOMERY EL DORADO. SOMEONE, A LADY I KNOW....OR DID KNOW, PHONED ME THAT I'D FIND MY SILVER HERE.
IT WAS MRS. DARDANELLA WHO PHONED.
OH OH! DO YOU TOO KNOW MRS. DARDANELLA, MR. EL DORADO? OH OH!
ANYHOW, AS I SAY, I WAS TOLD TO HURRY DOWN HERE, AND IN SPITE OF JUST GETTING BACK TO TOWN TODAY, I....
I'D LIKE TO HAVE A WORD WITH YOU LATER, EL DORADO, ABOUT MRS....
WELL GENTS, TO GET BACK TO THIS SILVERWARE.... THESE SUSPECTS ARE....
5-31
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
SUSPECTS? BY JOVE, YOU MEAN YOU'RE HOLDING MR. BUNGLE ALONG WITH THESE OTHER TWO... AH...PECULIAR-LOOKING CHAPS?
I'M NO SUSPECT! I'M THE PARTY WHO BROUGHT THE POLICE.
LISTEN, WE'RE NO BURGLARS. WE CAN PROVE....
DON'T GET TOUGH, BUNGLE. YOU'VE MADE PLENTY OF TROUBLE FOR OTHER PARTIES, ME!
LISTEN AMBUSH, OUTSIDE WITH YOU OR....
GENTLEMEN, PLEASE! AH...THERE'LL BE NO PROSECUTION, OFFICERS. I THINK I CAN HANDLE THIS AFFAIR MYSELF. YOU MAY GO.

WHEN JOE TRIED TO GET BATTLING BLITZEN TO FIGHT DYNAMITE, ALL HE GOT WAS THE BIRD-THIS TIME HE THINKS IT'S WISER TO ASK THE HELP OF BIG JIM KELLY, THE PROMOTER IN SWINGING THE MATCH
REMEMBER MY SAVIN' YOU FROM HAVIN' TO GIVE THE CROWD BACK THEIR MONEY?- AN' YOU SAYIN' YOU'D DO SOMETHIN' FOR ME SOMETIME?
I SURE DO, JOE-ANYTHING I CAN DO I WILL DO!
THEN HOW ABOUT GETTIN DYNAMITE A MATCH WITH BATTLING BLITZEN?
SAY! THAT'S AN IDEA! IT'D BE A WOW! I'LL TRY IT JOE-ILL WIRE BLITZEN'S MANAGER TODAY!
THANKS JIM! THAT SURE IS SWELL OF YOU!
FORGET IT- I AIN'T DONE NOTHIN' YET I'LL LET YOU KNOW TOMORROW HOW I MADE OUT!
JOE MUST BE NUTS! HE DROPS A CHANCE FOR A HALF-MILLION-DOLLAR GATE IN MY LAP- AN' THINKS I'M DOIN' HIM A FAVOR!

GOOD THING I'M A BOY SCOUT AN' KNOW WHAT TO DO FOR DROWNING/ I'LL PUMP THAT WATER OUT OF HIM AN' HE'LL BE AS MEAN AS EVER IN A MINUTE/
YOU'RE A DESERTER/ FROM NOW ON I'M KEEPING YOU LOCKED UP/
WHERE AM I, ANYWAY?

DIXIE DUGAN — Now For Real News! — By J. P. McEvoy and J. H. Striebel

PSST— MICKEY!
WE GOT SO INTERESTED TALKIN' ABOUT ALL YOUR MONEY WE HAVEN'T HAD A CHANCE T' TALK ABOUT ANYTHING IMPORTANT
TELL ME, MICKEY—DID YOU MEET ANYBODY ON YOUR TRIP?

THE GUMPS — A Poor Relation

THERE IT IS! THAT'S WHAT I GET— I TRIED TO BE KIND AND GENEROUS- I OFFERED THAT GIRL EVERYTHING IN THE WORLD AND THIS IS THE WAY SHE REPAYS ME- THEY'VE TIED UP MY MONEY, ENJOINED MY HAPPINESS- RESTRAINED MY PEACE OF MIND- THEY'VE BOUND ME FINANCIALLY AND TORTURED ME MENTALLY-
5-31
AND WHAT WAS THE AWFUL CRIME I COMMITTED TO DESERVE SUCH PUNISHMENT? JUST ONE THING- I LOVED MILLIE DESTROSS.
WELL- THEY'VE GOT ME THIS TIME- IT'S NO USE FIGHTING BACK ANY MORE NOW- I GUESS I'M DONE FOR-COME ON DON'T LET THEM THROW YOU OLD BOY- KEEP UP THE OLD GUMP SPIRIT!
OH, UNCLE BIM- IF WE HAD A MILLION DOLLARS WE'D GIVE IT TO YOU IN A MINUTE- BUT WE HAVEN'T IT-

YOU'RE THE DOC WE PHONED FOR?
YES.
DOCTOR KLEGG WHOM YOU CALLED COULDN'T GET AWAY, AND HE ASKED ME TO COME. WHERE IS THE PATIENT.
THIS WAY.
LARCENY LU'S EYES NARROW WITH SUSPICION! HER BRAIN WHIRLS MADLY AS SHE ATTEMPTS TO IDENTIFY THE "DOC"... SOMEWHERE SHE HAS SEEN THAT FACE BEFORE!
AT THE NEXT INSTANT, "SCOTTY" STOOPS BESIDE STEVE'S BED- AND AS HE DOES SO, A CHECKERED CAP FALLS FROM BENEATH HIS COAT! THEN, LIKE A MECHANICAL GEAR DROPPING INTO ITS SPROCKET, LU PLACES HER MAN! SHE SIGNALS CURLEY!
STICK 'EM UP, PHONEY!

WINNIE WINKLE, the Breadwinner — All Work and No Pay

Walt Mason, Himself

The Dust Storm.

Out in the dear old Middle West, of all fair regions first and best, the dust storm's sometimes known; a wind comes roaring from the south, like vapors from a furnace mouth, by giant bellows blown. And everything that's in its path is blown, in elemental wrath, to counties far away; the air is full of cats and dolls, gents' furnishings and parasols, and cabbage-heads and hay. The wind bears off all real estate that isn't hard as rock or slate, all things not fastened down, the washing from a thousand lines and sermons lost by sad divines while groping through the town. The air is full of hens and curs, and hollyhocks and cockle-burs, and branches torn from trees, it's full of whiskers and of lids, of toy balloons lost by the kids, and hives of bumble bees. You can not see the sun or moon, there's darkness in the afternoon, you have to light the lamps; the dust is plastered everywhere, and people wring their hands and swear like irreligious scamps. The wind blows north two days or three, then lulls, while folks cry "Hully chee," then blows back south again; and when at last it dies away, the village boosters rise and say, "This country suits he-men!"
